COUNTY JAIL CONDEMNED

State Authorities Condemn Adams County Jail. Notification not yet Received Here. Sheriff Fissel on the Subject.

The Adams County Jail is condemned. This is embodied in a report to the State Board of Charities made at Harrisburg on Wednesday night by Stanley Wharton, general agent and secretary.

Sheriff Fissel when interviewed regarding the matter said: "I have not received any notification of such action. For twenty years the Jail has been condemned because it was not considered a safe place in which to keep prisoners. Only a few years ago one grand jury condemned it on this account.

"All I do is to make the best of conditions as they confront me and the Jail is open to inspection at any time. Only last week it was inspected by a party who has been many jails and he declared the place in first class condition and a model as compared with some other county prisons. No state inspective has been made since I have been in office."

At the office of the County Commissioners no notification has been received. County Commissioner Culp when speaking about the matter said:

"The only thing for which the Adams County jail could be condemned is in the line it is not safe. The prison is certainly kept in a satisfactory and sanitary condition.

Ten other county jails were condemned by the board and it has not been made public on what grounds each one was found to be faulty. In some places the state has said there are no jail yards and that the prisons are not kept clean and in one instance for the adverse report but neither of these could be charged against this county.

The other counties in which the jails are condemned are as follows: Carbon, Columbia, Crawford, Franklin, Huntingdon, Lebanon, Susquehanna, Schuylkill, Clinton and Venango.

OH LONG THIP

J. F. Hammel and H. J. Schnessman, of Philadelphia, spent Tuesday night and part of Wednesday in Gettysburg. They are on their way to Savannah, Georgia, from Philadelphia.

They are riding "Arabian" motor cycles manufactured by Mr. Hummel. The cycles left Philadelphia Sunday morning and reached Reading that evening. The next day they rode to Harrisburg, where they put up for the night. Tuesday night they remained in this place.

After eating over the battlefield Wednesday morning, they continued on their journey and arrived in Waynesboro about 2 o'clock.

Wednesday was their hardest ride to climb the mountains. They also met with their first accident.

Coming down the mountain their brakes heated and needed resplacement.

The riders are enjoying their ride very much and are deriving much benefit from it.

They have followed the national highway thus far out on account of it continuing in a direct line way. They have no fixed schedule but they are making fine time.

TO BOOM EMMITSBURG

At a meeting of representative business men Monday night the permanent organization of the Business Men's Association of Emmitsburg was effected by the election of Sterling Gallagher as the first President. Committees, with other officers The organization will start with a town twenty members. The men will meet monthly and will act as a board of trade. This is a part of a well defined plan for advancement of the business of the community.

NO ONE KNOWS

State officials from Governor Edwin S. Stuart to members of the senate and house have been fairly deluged with protests and letters of inquiry over possible changes to be made in the National Guard of Pennsylvania by the operation of the Dick militia law, designed to make the state guard more like the regular army in organization. As a matter of fact none of the state officials yet knows what will be done.

NEW FLAVOR

Grinding up a snake which had crawled among the apples in a cider press, the family of Paul Elsner, near Red Lion, and a number of their friends were made sick last week. Mr. Elsner had taken his wagon load of apples last in the day and the mill having closed, the apples were left in the press over night. It is thought that here is when the reptile got among them. It was found afterward but not much attention was paid to the circumstance until those who drank the cider became ill.

Kind Neighbors

Wenksville, Nov. 13.—Lewis Gruer, who has been on the sick list is still unimproved. A number of his neighbors gathered at his farm on Saturday and husked his corn. Somerset Hoke's kindness was greatly appreciated if by her, Gruer and family.

HUNTING SEASON IS SUCCESSFUL

Hunters Report Good Results of Days in the Woods. Rabbits Plentiful but Few Pheasants. Quail in Some Sections.

The hunting season in Adams County up to this time has proved one of the best ever known in this part of the state. Farmers have come home after a day's outing with their bags full of rabbits, squirrels and quail.

The opening of the spotted season for deer has caused a number of the sons to make a number of hunters out to the woods in October but since the open season for deer opened on the 15th instant the interesting most of their attention to them, letting the smaller game go.

Although the rabbits season opened on November 1st, it is reported that there is still considerable complaint about it being too early. The scarcity of the rabbits has been the reason for good sport and the animals are not as good as they will be in a few days. Notwithstanding this the county rabbits have been shot in all parts of the county the first hunted little animals are now looking for peace. The first day of the season Bendersville hunters reported 200 killed and New Oxford 100.

Pheasants are scarce as ever and up to this time reports of less than a score killed have come to our office. Quail hunting seems to be the most plentiful and some good bags have been made. Hunters report them to be in fine shape afford good hunting. Wild turkeys are seldom shot in Adams County.

The opening of the season on Monday is the event to which the hunters have been looking forward to. Preparations were never better for a successful season. Many will be out in the mountains, in camp and hunting individually.

Teachers Meet

The teachers of Hamilton township held their second educational meeting, in Hamilton school, on the Pine Run school. The meeting was called to order by the President, Bernard E. Gilbert. The first part of the program was taken up largely by the school officers with the chairman as presiding officer. The following were appointed: How to make the daily program interesting, Samuel H. Fisher. This was followed by remarks from Prof. Thomas, D. B. Hauver and G. Allen Yohe. "How to Avoid Yard-ness," was then taken up and discussed by Miss Ella Hoffman, Miss Bertha and Jennie Hoffman. "Incentives to School Work," by Miss Ella Hoffman. "Busy Work," by Miss Ella Hoffman. "Busy Work," by Miss Ella Hoffman. "Busy

ONE of the most common diseases among horses is colic. This may be caused by many things, a sudden change of food or anything else that will affect the digestive system unfavorably. Refusing to eat, crying, groaning, looking around at flank, lying down and getting up again are some of the common symptoms of colic. A good remedy to have on hand for colic is turpentine, one ounce; essentials Iodine, one-half ounce; alcohol, four ounces; water, one pint. This should be shaken well and given as a drench. In severe cases a veterinarian should be sent for.

Barbed Wire Cuts.

Wherever horses are allowed to run in pastures fenced with barbed wire there will be frequent need of treatment for wire cuts. In case the cut is deep, with considerable bleeding, the first thing to do is to stop the flow of blood. Alcohol, tincture of iron or tincture of iron or tincture of myrrh will be good for this purpose. A solution of chloride of lime is still better. If the bleeding is from a large vessel, compression will have to be applied toward the heart if an artery is cut or away from it if the vein is cut. Usually, however, barbed wire cuts do not bleed seriously. The wound is cleaned thoroughly with warm water to which carbolic acid has been added all the rate of 1 to 100. If the cut is "blind sinus" an opening should be made at the lower part to allow the pus to escape freely. The wound should be washed daily with a solution of one ounce of zinc, one dram to one pint of water, and a little powdered iodoform dusted on it, while iodoform gauze bandage, pertains the formation of "proud flesh" and keeps the flies away. A fifty feed wound should be dressed by a veterinarian, as proper treatment will reduce the size of the resulting scar.

Galls.

When horses are put to work in the spring galls are very likely to form on their shoulders. This can be prevented by the use of collars and by occasionally leading the horses to work gradually. The use of pads is seldom advisable, as they become filled with sweat and are liable to cause irritating. A hard boiled collar that fits snugly to the horse's neck is the best thing to use. The harness should fit the collar snugly. Washing the shoulders in warm water every night helps to keep them from getting hard. Soaps of lead, creasy pitching to one ounce of water, or nitrate of silver, one dram to one ounce of water, is a good remedy. The following salve is also a good one for sore shoulders. After they have come formed: Pulverized alum, four ounces; Pulverized bloodroot, four ounces; white lead, four ounces; calomel, two ounces. Mix with glycerin, a crust oil or lard to make an ointment.

Dysentery.

Dysentery, or a wasting away of the intestines of the abdomen, occasionally occurs in farm horses. It is caused by a check to pulling with only one leg of transmitting the disease from one cow to another. All litter in the stall should be burned, and the stall should be burned as soon as cleaned out.

For internal use two remedies said treatment has given the best results. One of the best ways to give this is to salt at the rate of 2 parts to 100 parts of barrel salt. Pure carbolic acid crosses in crystals and will have to be liquefied by placing the bottle in hot water for a few moments. The acid should be poured over the salt and stirred in well. This makes an unpleasant mixture to handle and is placed where the cows can get it at will. Hired, begin about two months before calving with cows that have not been treated and three months with those that have not.

The cows after should be kept separate from the rest of the herd until it is certain that they are free from infection. If there is any unusual discharge they should be returned to the stable and treated in the strict course of preventive treatment.

Garget.

Heavy milking cows are often affected with a caked bag from chill after calving. The first symptoms appear from one to three days after calving. The cow becomes uneasy, ceases to eat or chew the cud and the secretion of milk is considerable pain. The walk is unsteady, and if forced to move about she is unable to rise. If not attended to, death is the usual result.

The cause of milk fever is not definitely known. The theory that heavy milkers it may be due to part of the milk being reabsorbed again and acting as a poison to the nerves. Light feeding for a week or two before the parturition is good preventive treatment. One to two pounds of epsom salts given a few days prior to calving will reduce the liability to the disease. When the udder is greatly enlarged previous to calving it is well to milk out.

The most effective remedy for milk fever is what is known as the air treatment. The method is pumping the udder full of air, one quarter at a time, and tying it well to keep the air into all parts. A common bicycle pump may be used, but a regular milker pump unit is not at hand. Both the udder and the teats should be well disinfected before the treatment is given.

Hog Cholera.

Hog cholera and the closely allied swine plague are two of the greatest sources of loss in the swine industry. The first disease is a germ disease. There are red and purple blotches on the skin, especially about the extremities and the eyes. The walk is often unsteady. Vomiting and diarrhea are common.

There is no internal treatment that has any curative effect. The best method of handling it is by prevention. Dogs, cats and poultry should not every hog-cholera case herd to another and should be disinfected before the treatment is given.

VI.—Pastures and Forage Crops.

THE cheapest gains on farm animals are made with grass pasture. Pastures should be made to have a plentiful supply of land at all seasons. Grass with the exception of salt feed on them which can be used for pasture to advantage. The second growth clover is especially valuable for milk cows, calves and hogs.

Permanent Pastures.

Pastures should be rotated where possible. Where a four year rotation is practiced one-fourth of the cultivated land will be grass each year. This will generally be more than is needed for hay, in which case part of it can be used for pasture. In addition to this, there is usually some land on every farm that is too wet or too rough to be used for anything but permanent pasture. Where none of these permanent pastures are weedy and unproductive. A dose of sheep or goats will do much to get rid of the weeds. If there are any thistles they should be cut when in bloom and a handful of salt put on the roots.

Where an area of land has been very severely overgrazed in the past it will be absolutely necessary that it be recuperated for the best results, for two or three years. The native grasses and forage plants usually have a tendency to wash their former vigor and to go to weed. A very good mixture for permanent pastures on rolling land—that is, keeping all stock off for a period of three or four years. That this treatment will bring about the desired results has been demonstrated in a number of instances.

To increase the productivity it will be necessary to thicken the stand and loosen the soil. The yield of pasture can often be increased by using a disk over them in the spring. This is especially true if the land previously in grass seed to the acre are used at the same time. There is no question but that this makes clover for the wet spots. Alsike is a good variety to use although it is not liked well enough by the stock to make a pure stand of better grasses will grow.

Alsike clover (Trifolium hybridum) is a perennial clover whose appearance suggests a hybrid between red and white clover, but it is not a hybrid. It will thrive on soil too wet for red clover, but on ordinary soils it does not do not to be so highly recommended. Timothy is the most generally valuable of the best results.

In the standard pasture mixtures throughout the corn belt is white grass. For early spring pasture it is unsurpassed, nothing can excel it. It is nutritious, the stock likes it, it does not easily get injured by trampling, and it is a good grower. The chief objection to it is that it practically ceases growth during the hot, dry, summer months. At this time it is necessary to supplement it by some pasture plant which will grow and furnish pasture then. Orchard grass is not to be depended upon to furnish much pasture. It is hardly as nutritious nor is it fitted as well for pasture as timothy. It is a rapid growth and continues to grow throughout the summer months. When sown in a mixture of other grasses, and it stands the drouth well, it is without question the most valuable grass for pasture. Press this time are a good thing every spring will keep the lawn in good condition. Any thin spots which appear can be reseeded at this same time. A few trees scattered here and there throughout the pasture protect the stock from heat and flies.

Summer Forage Crops.

With the best of pasture, however, some additional green feed is necessary, especially during the midsummer months. At that time of year, when days are hot and weeds, a few exceptions, as the foul species means a loss in gain on pasture stock and in milk production from the cows. A well planned system of forage crops for this time will give larger returns for the land than almost anything else that can be grown. Forage crops can often be used to good advantage as a catch crops where other crops have failed to grow or after something else has been harvested. Forage crops by leveling the land occupied with a main general crop help to keep weeds in control. They also enable one to keep all stock on the farm that would be the case otherwise.

One of the best forage crops is rape. It yields heavy crops of excellent feed. It is especially valuable for lamb and sheep. They are not particular pets on rape, particularly if a little grain is given in addition. Rape should be sown in the spring at the rate of about five pounds to the acre broadcasted or two and one of pounds drilled. The seed bed should be well worked. The greatest amount of feed per acre is obtained if the rape is cut and fed. A more economical way of handling it, so far as labor is concerned, is to turn small movable pens or a pasture divided into small lots and change the animals frequently from one to the other. If the rape is allowed to grow tall the force down so closely that it is killed by the first severe frost.

Sweet corn is a valuable forage for milch cows or stock. It is very nutritious and considerably should be sowing, and the planting should be thus.

Corn and fed from every day in the season ly retained. It is especially good for horses, giving a fine bloom to the coat.

Sorghum and Kaffir corn are used considerably as forage crops, especially in the southern states. About fifty or sixty pounds of seed to the acre are used when sown broadcast or in drills for the summer months. They are sown with a grain drill by stopping the holes in the hopper that the fertilizer makes the best feed. If all the sorghum is not used as it grows it can be cut and shocked for winter use. It will have to be left in the field as needed for feeding, as it spoils when cured.

A Good Forage Crop.

Indian corn is a good forage if sown thickly enough. The largest amount of feed is obtained when planted with the tractest drill broadcast, so that the plants will be about four inches apart. Corn which has not developed enough to mature before frost is a good forage crop for "soaping the down." The tops may be cut for feed and the butt left until ready for market. A few stalks turned in with the hogs will be found when the fat hogs have missed. Lassie get all the corn they can eat when first turned in the fall, especially if they have not had the butt stalks before.

Rye is a good crop to be obtained by sowing rape or a mixture of rape and clover with it shortly after the planting. If there is moisture enough in the ground and the seed will have produced a splendid crop of fall forage which will be ready to feed early in the spring.

An excellent forage crop for pigs is Canada field peas. They may be sown in the spring at the rate of one-half bushel to the acre broadcasted or two bushels of oats. If sown alone they will require about two and one-half bushels to the acre. The hogs may be turned on them when they are in the dough stage. In the southern parts of the country cowpeas may be used in the same way.

Rutabaga turnips are considered a good quality of hay. It is also used considerably as a forage. Mangels are a dangerous feed for horses, but are fed to other classes of stock without safety.

Succulent Crops For Winter.

While not strictly forage crops, root crops, pumpkins and squashes are very valuable for winter. Roots, both mangels and turnips yield heavily, but require considerable handling to secure the growing season. Carrots are especially good as a horse feed. Squashes yield as many tons of dry matter to the acre as roots, but are not as good feed and are much more easily grown. Pumpkins yield as large crops as squashes in the corn fields with little extra labor.

LATE OR EARLY HATCH—WHICH?

We quit late chicks long ago, for the few that then survived, if they don't get ramp and cause an epidemic, do not by much the shorter or sweeter side of make luncture breeders.

Our pictures show the great difference between April and August chicks at same age.

On Sept. 16 the April birds weighed 4lb. and one-half pounds and the August only one and one quarter pounds and were just feeling their first frosts.

APRIL CHICK—SIZE SEE AND NOTE.

March, April and May are the ideal breeding months. These breeders secure their pouts in the balmy spring air, feed on fresh verdure, catch the early worm and are at their best in health and vigor for laying and their fertile productive powers, dormant all winter, do active.

Eggs thus blithly fertilized hatch sturdy vigorous chicks; lose all weak and have every natural advantage for meeting cold, wet, disease or early maturity. That comes the best.

Breeders after three months' breeding and moping are worn down, best recovering; they only give fertile eggs and weak chicks. Incubator hens are not in control; brooders and brooder warms.

Tender vegetating and juicy bugs and worms on which early chicks wax fat are mostly dried up. Mild weather, in which the first chicks spotted in cool, dewy grass and scratched in shade, is succeeded by the sun and stroke season and parched, hot ground.

This is not theory. Witness the natural drought of the past two seasons.

AUGUST CHICK—SIZE SHOWS SEE.

in the eastern states. Even the best fell from their hilling pieces, and large wagons died on the roads.

Such dry weather is not just right for young turkeys and chicks, as many suppose, as it dampers their natural food, stunts their growth and brings disease. Summer is the live breeder, and the combination of rains of spring and thick, breeding very rapidly. The early chicks are not battered much with vermin and pull through the usual fall period without much trouble from those bloodsuckers.

Heat should not be set in hot weather. The inactivity of hocking and self denial of brooding with fire and heat, weaken them for that trying ordeal, the moult. We seldom hatch after the first week in June, for the entire feed of corn, plus the best chick's pick of sprouts.

DON'TS.

Don't jerk or shake hot work. The needy is to money ready; the rest are short of cash.

Don't sell preserved eggs for fresh stock as Saturday and occupy the chief seat in the corner of the store all day.

Don't let greed rule you to overstock the feed and stab those in need and then occupy the corner and pray "Amen!" A hasty amen does not always come in honest mein.

Don't let any one argue you into believing that poultry can eat anything, and try to save money feeding mangy food. If you do such a thing "the feed aren't all dead yet," but it isn't chickens may be.

Don't put off till tomorrow what you put off yesterday or to-day.

Don't sell your surplus birds before they are so matured that you may know for sure that you have kept the best for show and seed.

WELLS OF QUALITY.

It Is Money Well Spent to Buying a Good Site.

A good notary can tell themselves every year that the next boil they buy will be a most better one than they ever bought before. This is indeed a good results, and it is one of the first signs of progress. But so often these investors are left at home or some their influence when it comes to the art of buying, and the inexperience of a few dollars by buying a cheap boil is by himself, and the loss of many dollars material improvement in the succeed ing years of the well and its equipment. The influence of a good sizer, we feel, is not sufficiently appreciated, as may to quote from "The Business of Dairy ing," as follows:

Let us follow up this matter and see why a good size is really worth to a dairyman. With the other factors we have furnished half the guidlines, provided the well is a reasonably good potent. But the cows last but one calf a year, while the boil may last one-half of the calves in the herd. If it is of ordinary quality it will be a constant source of good type the chances are that will not be worth more than two calf rows, particularly if it is a grade herd. If it is a pure bred herd it may be worth possibly more than all the cows in the herd but the chief benefit of a good generation of calves its improvement in the quality of the herd through succeeding more finely feed, while the defects from the dam generally die out with the bull may become practically the whole herd.

If he has been well bred and his individuality has been good it is possible for the sire to be the means of more than doubling the production and income profits of the herd. Looking at this from a financial standpoint, that is evidence is clear that the most careful attention should be given to the selection of the sire. His ancestry is of even more importance than that of the cow, and every dairyman knows that he comes from a good milking strain. He should be also bred in order that his characteristics may be well fixed and consequently he is more influence than a grade dam. He should show vigor and good individual type. Such a sire need not cost more than one-tenth of the grade herd which he heads, yet he may have the most influence in the improvement of the herd.

Indeed, the pure bred sire of good individuality is the cheapest way to get grade and for reasons that should be evident at every thinking man's mind. A general proposition it costs from two to three times as much to raise a bull as it does to grow a steer. In short, it takes more feed and better care.

Needless to say, a good bull is a pure bred sire. A sire of any other description should not be used at all in the hope to make any progress in improving the herd. A good many men have been led to believe that a grade sire is as good as a pure bred sire. In the case of the dairy herd for instance here and there where a grade sire has been used to advantage his own qualities, but this is the exception and not the rule. A grade is good so often that it is not safe to break it.

When Buying the Bull.

When buying your bred bull don't pay any too much attention to the value of his extras. Veal is a minor consideration on the dairy farm.

STOCK VAGARIES

Try an open bridle on the skittish horse and the rest. A feeding is sufficient, with plenty of hay and roughage, for most animals they are liable to become foundered.

Feeding Dogs.

It is a good rule in fattening hogs never to feed as much as some as they want or not enough as they will eat. Regulate the feed to take the next feed better and do better and not to give them more than they will clean up.

Feed For Colts.

The colt should have a variety of feeds, so that it may build up the various tissues of the body. Clover hay and wheat bran contain necessary minerals and muscle and bone forming matter. Flaxseed meal in small quantities is also beneficial, while the colt's bowels in good condition and for making the coat glossy.

The Brown Swiss Cow.

Statistics show that a well kept brown Swiss cow fed on cut grass or hay, with plenty of pure fresh water, will yield as much as ten quarts of milk per day throughout the year. It is also said that the glabulus of better fat of Swiss milk globules are larger than those of the other European breeds of cattle.

It is a good rule in fattening hogs never to feed as much as some as they want or not enough as they will eat. Regulate the feed to take the next feed better and do better and not to give them more than they will clean up.

Feed For Colts.

The colt should have a variety of feeds, so that it may build up the various tissues of the body. Clover hay and wheat bran contain necessary minerals and muscle and bone forming matter. Flaxseed meal in small quantities is also beneficial, while the colt's bowels in good condition and for making the coat glossy.

The Brown Swiss Cow.

Statistics show that a well kept brown Swiss cow fed on cut grass or hay, with plenty of pure fresh water, will yield as much as ten quarts of milk per day throughout the year. It is also said that the globules of better fat of Swiss milk globules are larger than those of the other European breeds of cattle.

THE BEST SERVICE

The Country Merchant, the Home Merchant, the Gettysburg Merchant makes the dollar of the Home Shopper go further than any merchant in the city could.

HOW?

The city retailer buys his stock from the same manufacturer or jobber of whom the Gettysburg Merchant buys and the price is the same to both but the Home Merchant underselles the city merchant every time and at the same profit.

WHY?

The city merchant pays a rental of thousands of dollars where the Home Merchant pays hundreds or none. The wages of the help of the city man are higher, so are his taxes and every item of his expense accounts and in the selling price must be figured this greater expense account. The result is as absolutely true as two and two are four that the city man must and does sell the same article at a higher price to cover all his expenses than the figure at which the Gettysburg Merchant offers the very same article. The Gettysburg man gives his patrons the benefit of this saving in expenses and undersells the city man every time

Where Does the City Man Get Even?

He offers a bribe of a bargain or otherwise for the opportunity to double up stong some other line, or he offers a cheaper substitute, for he is not running his business as a charitable institution.

And the Result Is What?

The Home Shoppers discover that if the spending of the dollars had been where they were earned that they would done more good —brought the return of The Best Service more good to the Home Shopper and more good to his neighbor the Home Merchant.

LOVERS' BOWER.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyrighted, 1906, by American Press Association.]

Out of Lake Maggiore, in northern Italy, rises a sheer rock to a height of several hundred feet. On a pave where the embrasure stops the line resumed by the Peretti family during the middle ages when their territory was being divided up between the quarrelsome factions of the period. The stronghold built by Peretti is now a ruin and has been for centuries. Yet one may climb the ascent from it to the summit of the rock, proceeding here and there over short spaces of level land, and reach the Peretti's frequently ascended to the spacious decks down on the mainland. There bounds on this pinnacle a few wonderful flowers which grow in the clefts called "Lovers' bower."

Of the family now living in the house of Peretti, Bianca, who lived at a time when the Peretti were powerful in the House, was the most beautiful and the most sentimental. Her nature and her heart was so cold as her face was beautiful. Indeed there were few perfluss that dancer lurked under her beauty known as the love in which within the house. Several young nobles who had her at various times traveled to her home on Lake Maggiore in expectation that if they met indifference, Our was said to have fallen ill of love, and, although the barber on the Peretti estate by seventy six years of age, his body is so effort to save him, the young man died. Several others who have left the castle as a storm was rising. His boat was wrecked, and he was drowned in the presence of a third suitor had been accidentally killed in hunting. He fell from a wood, she having declared that she would marry him if he would bring her with the fell. But there were those who averred that this was sent to his death purposely by the lay hearted Bianca.

Whatever of truth there was in these peculiar reports, certain it is that none of these three young men ever returned from the wooing. Pietro Calloni, count of Melpago, who also had succeeded in being invited to a wooing. Pietro, count of Melpago, who also had succeeded in being invited to bend a warning. Pietro, could barely walk the days in silence when he should visit the girl he loved—he made those invitations, and the moon was no sooner half full than he set out from his castle on foot very northward. Reaching the lower end of the lake, he crossed it and saw the rock of the Peretin looming up out of the water. He knew that Count Peretti, Bianca's father, and an intractable disposition.

After dining Pietro drew Bianca away to a terrace and proposed to her reply. "I will give it," she said, "in the moment of my death." Turning forward, she led the way in the mirthful twilight and ascended to the path, which zigzagged upward. Pietro followed, and was soon started on a long climb. The path was a ledge at best always the lead. The lower now and then within his view, but the upward ahead, which to gain height had been turned at the beginning, seemed like gazed down on him, an enchanting face, lovely in her eyes. Pietro, compelled to be always above him, was that beautiful face, and he could not help looking out on to the blue lake, the snow mountains and the hills that encircled beyond. The next his glance went most those on the ledge lifting him as the moon draws the ocean. And all the while within him was the fire that was consuming him. At times when he turned it seemed to him that it was his brain reived, and he was like to fall. Several feet below him, and he

GRANGE RAPS CENTRAL BANK

Refused Body Soon on Record Against Plan.

SCORES SNIP SUBSIDY PLAN

Steps Against Atlantic's Bank Scheme Is Unanimous — Strong Legislative Platform Accepted — Creamy's First Report Read.

The National Grange, now in session at San Jose, Cal., representing a million farmers, went on record as being opposed to the Aldrich central bank scheme. The western representatives of the grange were the most particularly vigorous in their denunciation of Aldrich and his plan.

In his annual address at the opening of the forty-fifth session of the National Grange, National Master Barnes condemned the Aldrich party's action.

"The question of amending our national banking laws so as to provide a currency system that will prevent more chaotic in times of financial stringency, will come up in congress in the near future," said he, "Among other plans proposed as remedies for the present admittedly unsatisfactory conditions is that of the creation of a great central bank, which will be urged on the financial and speculative interests located in New York city and known commonly as 'Wall street.'

"So far as this plan has been out in the open it is vicious. In its individual tendency would be to create a gigantic banking monopoly that would place the thousands of small country banks at the mercy of the great financial interests. As the grange has always denounced every measure in any form, it is advisable that appropriate action be taken to express our opposition to such changes in our currency or banking laws that would place the bank or combination of banks advantage over all the others of the country."

These recommendations were embodied in the platform, which was unanimously adopted.

National Master Bachelder also rapped President Taft on the latter's ship subsidy stand.

The grange indorsed the se-mmeni of the democratic house, but also provides for aggressive work by the National Grange legislative committee toward securing a constitutional amendment, if necessary, to establish the action upon this proposition by a two-thirds majority of both branches of congress.

The legislative platform of the National Grange is as follows:

"Federal appropriation for highway improvement.

"Establishment of rural and general parcels post.

"Establishment of postal savings banks.

"Election of United States senators by direct vote.

"Apportionment of a permanent non-partisan tariff commission.

"Denial of ship subsidy legislation.

"Revision of the interstate commerce act.

"Liberal appropriation for farm schools."

In his report to the National Grange as representative from Penn sylvania, Master W. Creasy made seven progressive recommendations to the legislature and mended a new number of points in which farmers are deeply interested. In this report was referred to the committee on matters addressed.

Hypnotist Held For Man's Death.

In a little room finished room in the basement of the Masonic temple, a county hospital an attempt was made by the county physician yesterday to resuscitate the hypnotic subject, Hiram Scott, who had hypnotized and died under hypnotic influence. On some rough planks stood in a white bathtub, lay the body—living or dead—of the man Hiram Scott, whose life or livelihood and been as a subject in the strange power of Arthur Dove Stanton.

Stanton is in jail, charged with homicide.

Professor Everton opened a seven-day engagement in the Somerville theatre. He brought Scott and a seven-year-old boy here from Nashua as his subjects. He put Simpson in a field state and, pinching his feet on one of their soft his knees and pressing on his body without causing him pain, relieved him of the strain the performance. Everton clasped his wrists and ankles to the stage. Simpson Simpson's eyes rolled in a fear that his low drooped and he collapsed between the supports that rolled over the floor. He was carried to the room, and Dr. Herbert Worth was summoned but he seems greatly excited and finally lost his nerve.

Left $25,000,000 to Charity.

John Stewart Kennedy's will which was filed in New York, disposes of an estimated gross estate of $25,000,000 of which about $15,000,000 is bequeathed for charitable benefit, being distributed among various religious, education and charitable institutions.

The executors of the will are the executors with Hiram G. Kennedy who survives him; his nephews, William Stewart Bull and Robert Stewart Bull and Mr. De Forest, whom the testator describes as his friend.

Eleven colleges, Northfield seminary, the St. Vernon home for Indian girls, Mount Auxiliz college, at Nazareth, Pa., and the latter bequest being made for the college in the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, and Berea college in Kentucky.

Mrs. Astor Wing Divorce Suit.

In the space of one minute by the clock in the supreme court yesterday the names of either John Jacob Astor, 3d, millionaire, or of one of his wife, Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, jumped from No. 1 to No. 2 on the calendar of interlocutory decree of divorce to the latter and were the first entered on the papers as that the public shall know nothing of it.

The great wealth of the litigants and the social prominence of both of the lawyers managed on both sides engaged in the case has made it seem one of the most remarkable court proceedings ever held in this city, and now if not in the country.

The hearing in the case was not called, and the pressmen was so swift and unexpected as to surprise the majority of the two principals that the papers had been filed, although they knew that the divorce had been granted.

It is said that the court has ordered that Mrs. Astor shall have custody of Muriel Ava Alice Astor, her seven-year-old daughter by the marriage. She will take charge of Vincent, the son, by the first marriage, during the latter on the yacht Nourmahal in the West Indies.

Less Rather Gets $2000.

A masked bandit, working alone, took $2,000 in cash from the safe of Schuyler Rasler, seventy-two years old, in the office of the Rasler mines at Florence, N. J.

The robber then baffled the police by his desperate boldness. Although the Rasler mines are in the heart of the mills from the Florence penitentiary, and Trenton on the main highway between the two cities, after locking the aged man in the office, the bandit left the room, dynamited the big safe, which was hidden from view of the street and storehouse at times for as much as half an hour.

Mrs. Jane Nielson, nearly seventy years old, was alone in the kitchen of the farmhouse when the masked robber entered. She fainted immediately from the shock of the struggle with the bandit.

To Demand Higher Wages.

KILL AND BURN SLAYER OF GIRL

Mortorer Meets Horrible Fate at Cairo, Ill.

WOMEN PULL ROPE TO HANG HIM.

It Breaks and He Is Shot to Pieces, the Mob Dragging the Body Through the Streets to Scene of Murder and Burning It.

Cairo, Ill., Nov. 12.—With James the mayor unopposed and being the murderer of Miss Annie Pelley, was killed here by a mob. Jones was strung up to the public arch, the rope broke and at least fifty shots were poured into his body. He made a partial confession and implicated another negro, Arthur Alexander, for whom the mob is now searching.

The noose was hooked in the mouth of the prisoner and the crowd of which present were the first to push the rope, and the negro was uncontrollable, and they fired volley after volley into James' body from close to pieces.

The mob then dragged the dead negro to the scene of his crime, a mile distant from the arch at Twenty-sixth and Elm streets, and built a pyre of logs and throwing the bullet-riddled body upon it, set the mass ablaze, and the crowd stood by and with cries and curses watched the negro's body writhe in the flames.

Thousands of people witnessed the lynching.

The negro James was taken by the mob Sheriff Frank Davis of Alexander county, who had the prisoner in his custody twenty-four hours in the woods near Tamms, Ill., twenty miles north of here, dodging hands of men bent on lynching him.

At dusk he had evaded the scouts sent out to find him and was safe.

Later a report reached here that the sheriff and his party had been seen on the road near Karnak, a small town twenty miles south of Cairo.

Acting on this information, which came from railroad employes and others, a number of automobiles and similar runners, 200 men raised a freight train and left for Karnak, and here, attached a switch engine to it and started for Cairo. The sheriff later on and had come from this expedition.

DREAMS WRECK BED

Two Football Players Tackle Each Other in Their Sleep.

Georgetown, Del., Nov. 12.—Dream that he was playing football in a game of a stirring football game, Torbert Will ams and Lester Wilson, both members of Georgetown, were awakened in the early hours of the morning by a fall on the bed across the room, had dreamed that they were playing football pummeling each other, while their dreams were so realistic that they awoke in their efforts to make a touchdown.

Both men suffered considerable injury, and both must have been drawn into the same dream at the same time. Dennis' father was awakened by the fall and hastened to the bedside.

"You made the goal!"

Finding the room, he was surprised to find the boys fighting, while each declared that he had made the goal. Both looked sheepish when awakened, and could not remembered anything except that in their dream they were having a fierce time and struggling to make a touchdown.

BANDIT SLAYS BANK CASHIER

Dives Up Auto and Shoots Three Men.

FATALLY SHOT CHAUFFEUR

Bojah Desperado Was Then Captured in a Cliff on the Ohio River and Saved From Lynching by Force of Police. Refuses to Give His Name.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 12.—In an attempt at bank robbery, a young man who has been partially identified as Arthur Hall, of Louisville, a dealer in second-hand furniture, entered the Merchants' National bank of New Albany, ind., and killed J. Hensey Pewett, cashier of the bank, severely wounded John K. Woodward, president of the bank, and wounded James T. Tucker, a colored chauffeur, probably fatally.

When Hall entered the bank he carried a pistol in each hand. After committing every one to throw up his hands and say not to shoot, Pewett began shooting.

Cashier Pewett was shot through the chest and neck and died almost instantly. President Woodward was shot through the liver and his injuries are serious. Tucker, the colored chauffeur, was shot through the body.

Following the shooting, the robber ever came into the bank and tried to escape in an automobile which he had driven from the front door of the residence of Ex-owner. Mrs. Wilhelmina Kruger, 1,000 feet from the bank. The chauffeur refused to start the machine and was pulled out of the car by the negro in the bank and run down the street. The negro then got in the car himself and was on his way to the Louisville bridge when he was halted by two local citizens of New Albany knew the fugitive personally.

As alarm was given through a megaphone and in a short time several policemen had started in pursuit of the fleeing robber.

Capturing their man, they brought him to shore where by a ruse Police Captain Allen secured the loot, a roll of 200 persons which crowded around the police station to get a glimpse of him. Commanding the prisoner to lie down, Captain Allen searched him, and discovered that the man had taken poison with the intention of committing suicide. In an automobile to the Southern Indiana insane asylum, but succeeded in escape the mob which, realizing that they had captured the wrong man, surrounded the jail.

The police at the reformatory the prisoner refused to give his name and to all questions put to him answered by questions.

The bandit is good looking, is a boyish, somewhat effeminate way. His hair is black and curly and cut so as to not cover twenty years old and is 5 feet 6 inches tall.

THREE KILLED BY EXPLOSION

Who Are Shaken When Powder Mill Lets Go.

SIX HOUSES DAMAGED

One of the Victims Was Blown to Atoms—Children Were Struck by Flying Missiles—Explosion Four and Five Tons of Powder Expected.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 12. — With two resounding reports, accompanied by exceptionally heavy shocks, two mills in the Hagley yard of the E. I. Dupont de Nemours Powder company were torn to bits and a crashing mill—were wrecked by explosions of powder. Three men were killed and several injured. Besides the mills destroyed the private residences were badly damaged. The property loss is $50,000.

The dead: Howard Duvergh, aged twenty-two years; Walter McDermott, aged twenty-three years, and Michael Kelly, aged twenty-five years.

The three victims and most of the injured were employes of the company and were at work in the section of the yard where the explosions occurred. The first explosion was heard and felt at 10:30 o'clock and the second at 10:45 o'clock. Both were heavy shocks, shaking up this city in a manner that caused many persons to rush from their homes to the streets. The shock was also felt in Kennett Square, Pa., Centerville, Camden, Gloucester and Woodbury and other towns.

A large draught horse owned by the company was killed by the explosion, tearing a car through the yard and was blown to bits. Two men were instantly killed.

Several of the persons injured were several children living on the north side of the Brandywine river, who were struck by flying missiles, which had been thrown across the river.

Following is a list of the injured: A. Lammot Dupont, Jr., assistant to assistant superintendent of the yard, was hurled from his horse when the latter's house was wrecked. Dr. Frank Hastings, a local practitioner of Preston Biddle was injured. The residence of Dr. Hastings was wrecked by flying debris and glass and falling doors injured Mrs. Hastings, a guest, and one who was a boarder.

The residence of James of the mills in which the explosion occurred are the nearest to the scene of the explosion mill, both of which are in the upper end of the yard, and both of which are per entrance to the yard is located. Mrs. Hastings was in the care of the sick packing mill. McDermott is supposed to have been working in the mill at the time. An effort was made to find the body, but it could not be found, but without result, and it is supposed that the body was blown to atoms.

So far as is known no person was at work in the prismatic mill when the explosion occurred, but the building is driving a powder car past the mill.

A HAPPY OLD MAID.

[Copyright, 1901, by Associated Literary Press.]

By M. GUAD.

There was no doubt that Martha Baker, thirty years old and unmarried, and the housekeeper for her widower brother, was homely. She admitted that she was, and that being so she must remain old or young, black or white, and not to be at the jumping off place before she will admit that. Yet she was honestly pretty, and that the latter held no hopes for her. If she had had the money to buy pelts and sealskins and false hair and fine hats and good clothes she could have overcome years of the homely and unstylish, but she didn't have any. Some people are, however, and some make fun of her, and she bows in meek philosophy as she could common-sense. Her brother still invited her to dinner until he could bring home a second wife, and yet that same brother felt wounded to take pains to be out of the house on those days.

Martha thinks, I believe you are the homeliest woman in the state. By John, but you'll make a cute, sweet tree look stuck!"

"Well, if originality's to blame it's the last," Martha would reply as she dished round the same old stew for him.

Sometimes a stiff, small voice would say to her that her time would come, but she had waited so long that the voice seemed to grow fainter to her. No woman has worn the same hat all the year round for years long years, with only changing ribbons from red to blue, from blue to green, and only blamed for it. That bit of bows was the joy of the neighbors. It never appeared on the street without countless smiles, and it never appeared in church without provoking titters that the minister could not suppress.

However, that still, small voice kept on counting, and one day it turned on the tongue for Martha Baker. She had been over the plow to an old woman, and that old woman was blind enough to die and leave her a hundred dollars in cash. The lawyer came for her signature and brought the proceeds. Martha had never had even $2 at a time in her life before. There were people to the village who were fairly well off, but to have a hundred dollars in cold cash put into one's hand all at once—why, it knocked the life out of Cynic business. The news went all over the place in an hour. Children stood at the gate with open mouths, and their mothers went to council on the money and to tender advice. There was advice on all subjects, investments, speculations and what not. Each had different views, and Martha, poor soul, was kind enough to listen to each one of it. It was wonderful how her ears came up. It stored at sees and went to 100 in a day or two. She was the richer she was talked about. The grocer who rolled a cigar between his lips and hanging out a sign of "Two Bars of Soap Free to Customers" didn't make two sales. The minister came with books under his arm, but never showed him at this time. They were about repaired for the church—a new carpet and all—the lecture in Africa instead.

"What on earth will Baker do with the money?" became the absorbing topic of every day and night.

It had not been in the village two weeks before it was known that she was going to Boston to do a little shopping and to attend to some arguments to dissuade her, but she was firm. She refused to intrust it to the cars would run off the rails or that she would be robbed in the train. From car to car and come home beggar for shelter and prayer to the edges of the cut together. It was a terrible journey, and when it was all piled before her eldest, but she walked to the depot on the morning as she called and boarded the train.

There was no car for any one in the village that day. Martha Baker had gone to Boston to spend her own big money. Which would it be? No one knew which she came back and no one would. No one knew for the next four days. Then she got out at the depot. In other words, two big dry goods stores knew her by sight. Martha Baker Bill had been hauled in the house and opened her eyes with his store. She refused to name the contents to him or any of the other dealers. It was only when the papers were removed that he suggested that she was "fly thunder" on his tips. It was only when a certain shape was seen that by Martha to be gazed at that the owners and clerks were cried out.

"A hat! A hat! Martha Baker's got a new hat!"

"Yes, friends, thirty-six of them," replied Martha as the dired down for their tea.

Ten, thirty—three—by every church in the place. Those were very up, spring and fall hats. Those were all shaped and trimmed. They were the up-to styles of triumphant. Martha had bought the millinery for $25, and the balance of the money had gone for freight. The hats had been made and boxed and sent, and she was a happy old maid.

One Cumberland Township Citizen has Friend Arrested and Later Loans him Money to Secure his Release. Hit with Rock.

To be arrested for assault and battery on a charge preferred by a man who later loaned him money to pay the fine and costs of the case, seems like an unusual experience of Chauncey Bowers, of Cumberland township, on Friday evening.

Cigarmaker, it seems, had gotten into an argument with Hiram Hess also of Cumberland township, and the argument grew warm. Bowers, however, got too warm for Copenhaver and he picked up a rock and hurled it at Hess, one of Hess' friends, who was standing near by. The latter's normal course out for Copenhaver's arrest and Constable John Shuler on Friday evening placed Bowers in jail.

Saturday Squire Hill gave Copenhaver a hearing when the latter agreed to forget their troubles. Costs amounting to $8.50 were charged Roger Copenhaver but the latter refused to let him get out at once. The two men then engaged in a conversation and a promising the justice that there would be no further trouble between them.

TEACHERS HELD FIRST INSTITUTE

Abbottstown Scene of First of Series of Four Institutes to be Held during Winter Months. Addresses by Teachers.

Much interesting history is connected with a set of eight Hepplewhite chairs which have just been bought by Harry Hinkle, of Baltimore street, from Samuel Trimmer, of York. The chairs are now in the possession of Mr. Hinkle's brother, Dr. Hinkle, of Hanover.

The chairs were formerly the property of Rev. Daniel Bidwell, who was pastor of the Methodist church at The Glades, Adams county, and at the same time, in 1813, was an accomplished scholar and was said to have been a great wit. Many of his views did not coincide with those of Americans during the period just preceding and during the Revolutionary war.

He was a missionary sent from England. When he preached on a certain Sunday in York he made some remarks because of which the following day he was seized by bolstrous friends and carried to the Codorus creek and to the Codorus creek. Being freed, he returned to his home in The Glades, but a company came from York and took him to the latter place before there. A memorial from Rt. Bidwell from his prison was read in the Continental Congress and signed, and it is apparent that he was so educated by the Continental Congress that his life was in danger and he was soon released from prison.

The Hipplewhite chairs were sent to him at The Glades from the Deanery in London, and the chairs were sent by several hands and even became scattered. It was a fortunate chance that got three of them was made, and these in the possession of Samuel Trimmer, Mr. Trimmer's hands and then Mr. Hinkle bought them.

END OF AUTO RUN

The most successful cross country tour for the fall season of the season came to a close to a close of glory Saturday afternoon when a big field of good route tourists who passed through Gettysburg on their way to York, entered Atlanta shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon

The run was planned and travelcourse caravan, escorted by scores of local autos, and filled with the prominent men of the city fire bells, factory whistles and church bells and the cheers of enthusiastic thousands attended the streets awoke a bedlam of noise.

The tourists from Harrisburg, who were escorted to the Fleshood Driving Club for lunch, were met at that place and given time to dress and rest. At night they were guests at a dinner at the Colonial Hotel.

Splendid highways and almost perfect weather conditions prevailed during the entire run on any similar trip in the history of touring, according to the officials.

Ty Cobb, the ball player, who is a native of Georgia, is the hero of the day's journey. From the time he reached Cumberland, Md., shortly after 6 o'clock in the morning, until he reached the city Cobb's name was on every lip, and he received an ovation in every town and village.

The majority of the tourists will remain in Atlanta for automobile week, which opens here in a few days and is entertained by local motor enthusiasts.

HISTORIC OLD CHAIRS BOUGHT

TOWN LAYMEN ARE WORKING

Committee Appointed to Get Delegates to Big Convention to be Held at Harrisburg Latter Part of this Month.

A meeting was held in the College Lutheran Church on Monday evening to interest the people of the town and vicinity in the International Sunday Laymen's Missionary Movement. The meeting was well attended.

The principal address was made by Hon. Robert A. Orr, of Harrisburg, who explained the purpose of the organization in full and also told of the Harrisburg Big Four Men's Convention, November 22 to 24 explaining the necessity of having delegates at that convention.

The following committee was chosen to arrange for all of the denominations in town, to get delegates to attend the convention, it being expected that every minister in the county will be present, and people from his church will be present:

Reformed: H. T. Wenner, H. C. Sanders, Samuel Bair, Dr. Wm. Swope, Milton Brunner, Prof. W. A. Hargrove, Rudolph Hollinger, Lutheran: Dr. C. E. Miller, L. L. Taylor, R. Wm. Bruce, United Brethren: J. E. Coleman, C. H. Spangler, Charles G. Miller, Church of the Brethren: J. B. Wisehaupt, Methodist: Dr. W. H. Graham, Episcopal: Judge McClean, Hayward Wilson, Presbyterian: Dr. Wm. Swope, H. W. A. Mellhenny, Theodore Hamilton, Dr. Wm. Swope was made chairman, Prof. Burgoon secretary, and Mr. Taylor treasurer.

The committee will meet at six o'clock Wednesday evening in the recess room of the Presbyterian church.

The purpose of the movement is to get the men of the town and county to the Gospel Message in this generation. No new organization is formed, the object it intend to collect funds and administrate the work of the Laymen's Missionaries. Its purpose is to work through the present existing boards, societies and organizations of the church.

Seventy five conventions are to be held in the United States and Canada and in a National Missionary Congress at Toronto in June next.

One of the conventions is to be held in Harrisburg November 22nd, 23rd and 24th in the Pine Street Presbyterian Church. A strong program has been prepared for the three days' session, the speakers as J. Campbell White and John R. Mott, Dr. Wm. Swope, Dr. Taylor of the American Baptist Mission Union, Dr. M. D. Eastock, of Mexico, Dr. W. H. Grant, of Washington; Dr. Christopher Noss, of Lonaconing, Md., Bishop Hoss, of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Missions, Dr. Wm. Phillips Thompson, Rev. J. G. Robbins of the Philippines. All are widely known as leading men interested in the work of God.

The Harrisburg Committee advises that every delegate see about being enrolled and the outlook is that at least 1500 will be present.

KICKED ON HOSE

Jesse Utz, a farmer on the farm of H. D. Sheppard, near Schmuck's Church, was arrested by Constable Shuler in the stable early Friday morning when he was kicked in the face by a mule. Utz was taken to the home of one half of Mr. Utz's sons, and the wound bled profusely. Dr. Ed. Bailey, who was summoned closed the lacerated parts, which required several stitches.

Have You Kidney Trouble?

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if there is a cloudy appearance, if particles float about in it evidence of kidney trouble are at hand; if pain in the back or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys are affected and out of order.

DOG DOES CAUGHT

H B. Sefton, the Baltimore street, York, reports with pride his catch with hook and line of a twenty inch bass in Witherow's dam. The fish weighed 3 pounds and 10 ounces and was a very fine specimen.

RECOVERING

Mrs. Raymond Markle, are Miss Gobrecht, underwent an operation in John Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, in the beginning of the week. She is resting upon at the institution, is improving and may be able to return to her home in the Grove school house within a week.

HIS FIRST RIDE

Robert H. Patterson, of Emmitsburg, has a son who has gone to Baltimore for the first time in his life and enjoyed the ride on the trolley the first time on the trains, trolley cars, elevated railroads and subways. Patterson has lived in the quiet valleys of Pennsylvania and Western Maryland and had never seen the applications of modern science before.

Cottage Dues

Keeping destruction by a narrow margin of safety the fire which the last week had burned to within a few yards of it, when driven by a strong change in the wind, "Hellenbrew" cottage, on the Baltimore pike, near the Mummasburg Drive, owned by M. R. Hoffman, a State legislator of Lancaster county, was burned to the ground on Monday at 4.30 o'clock, when a strong breeze fanned up the dying embers anew. The loss upon the cottage is $20,000, on which there was insurance but no timber destroyed.

GOOD IDEA

Littlestown, Nov. 12—Littlestown is to have a municipal water plant, new concrete water gutters, one block on each street from the square on a time. It is also planned to have the streets as well as the character of the gutters will be improved in a manner that will also know just where the curb line is, so that property owners can lay their pavements they will not need to bank up someone to give them the curb line.

MANY WILL HUNT DEER

Deer are unusually plentiful about Cedarbrook and Mount Wolf, as will be proved among the sporting fraternity when the hunting season for the bucks of the Grantfunning law, has had requests from 45 hunters for accommodations at the Mount Wolf hotel. This is an unusually big number and with the fine weather the hunting of sly and graceful creatures will suffer this fall.

THE MISSIONARY CONVENTION

The speakers at the Laymen's Missionary Convention last evening at 7.30 in College Lutheran church were H. L. Carl, and H. B. Gerhardt, both of Harrisburg. The International Missionary Movement was explained. Many delegates will attend the convention to be held at Harrisburg, and an organization of the county was also to be effected. A large attendance at Wednesday's work will be welcome.

GOVERNMENT BAND

On Saturday afternoon will a band composed largely of substitutes Gettysburg College left for Annapolis to meet tomorrow against Susquehanna University in eight minutes of play. The members of the band were afterward because they were brought back to Gettysburg in automobiles, the team claiming that Susquehanna had been guilty of hippodroming.

The town team lost to St. John's A. C., at York by the score of 23 to 0.

POOR PLAY

A typical Saturday afternoon poorly played was the verdict of the several hundred Gettysburg people who were present at the Lyceum theatre to see "Poor Relations" in Walter's Theatre Monday evening. The play was one of the usual melodramatic situations, calculated to please the gallery gods, depending the hero and blaming the villain. The play was well staged and the support of two of the characters deserving a place on the boards.

MR. DILLER HAS ANOTHER FIRE

Isaiah Diller Visited by Another Night Fire. Buildings Saved by Energetic Work of Neighbors and Friends.

Another fire of mysterious origin Sunday night destroyed two large stacks of corn fodder on the farm of Isaiah Diller near Methodist Church, entailing a loss of about $300. The fire was the second which occurred on the farm of Mr. Diller in a period of a few weeks. Both fires were discovered about the same time of night, in October, and both occurred on Sunday.

The first fire, which occurred on Sunday, Sept. 25, destroyed the large bank barn, wagon shed, hog pen, corn crib and chicken house, together with the season's crops. Two horses, four mules, nine cows, one bull, seven hogs and 150 chickens also perished in the flames. The loss sustained at the first fire was estimated at $6000.

Sunday night's fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, as was also the first one, but as yet there is no clue to the perpetrator of the deed.

Mr. Diller desires to extend thanks to many neighbors and friends who gathered at the fire and were ready to aid him in every way possible. The burning fodder stacks were about 100 feet from the nearest building, which they were well guarded by these people against the danger of catching fire from the big blaze.

BACK TO WORK

Biglerville, Nov. 12.—Work was resumed on Monday at the Musselman Canning Company plant with a full force such a large quantity of apples are on hand now that the fruit is deteriorating for fifteen more women is said to be employed than before. Many of the apples have been received from New York State.

The company has bought 10,000 bushels of Adams County apples this fall and will receive about 25 carloads from New York making about 60,000 bushels for this season. They have already sent to market 12,000 cases of canned apples and 2,000 cases of catsup.

The Mere evaporating plant has been doing their usual amount of land now this year the plant has been a busy place with about 25 hands employed. As the number of hundreds handled this season we are uncertain.

BAD RUNAWAY AT MONT ALTO

Italian on Joy Ride Lets Team Run Down Mountain Side. Collides with Another Team Throwing Woman to the Ground.

There was a wild race at the foot of Mont Alto at around 10 o'clock Monday morning when the mail from the White Pine Sanitarium, into which other teams were drawn and in which several persons were seen by injured Sunday.

Rollins Jos., so he is known about Mont Alto, was driving the delivering to Contractor William L. Forney, Chambersburg, down the mountain from the sanitarium, when a team which drove up behind it, frightened it and started it off at full gallop down the steep mountain road.

The driver was soon thrown out and was severely bruised about the head and face. Without a driver, the horse's flight became more furious. Soon the animal caught up with the team of Edward McCleary, who was returning from the sanitarium with his milk.

The excited runaway made on at such a speed that the McCleary team lost struck the buggy and partly overturned it. Throwing Mrs. McPherson to the ground and cutting her face. One of her ankles was sprained severely.

It required the efforts of several men to get her to the office of Dr. W. H. Hoke, where she received treatment. She was then taken to her home at Losby In the clash with the McPherson team, the horse attached to the latter was not kept up its gait. At the foot of the hill the runaway left the road, it got loose from the demolished wagon and continued on to Upper Strasburg where it was caught in the evening.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A very enjoyable birthday surprise party was held at the home of George Schlosser, Littlestown, on the eighteenth birthday. Relatives and friends gathered at the home in the morning on and all spent a pleasant day. Mr. Schlosser received many gifts after which a chicken and turkey dinner was served. CONDEMNING W. F. & S.

The effort concerning the W. F. & G. R. R. and its exception by other interests has been in existence for some time but nothing absolutely definite has come to light up to this time. A great deal of correspondence has been spoken of on the street and the daily papers have contained articles but this is of consideration with the Public Service Commission and the absorption of the entire system by outside interests. It would appear at this time that the plans and intentions of these reports, that nothing that can be substantiated has as yet happened.

MOUNTAIN FIRE IS CONQUERED

Saturday Morning Rain Puts an End to Disastrous Mountain Blaze. Pen Mar Threatened. Fire Fighters Work in Vain.

A brand fire which probably started from sparks from the engine of the 8:15 a. m. train on Western Maryland railroad, Thursday afternoon and which raged all day Friday was extinguished by the heavy rainfall between 1 and 2 Saturday morning.

The fire started on the Mountain House and tore up the mountain side towards High Rock at a terrific pace, nearly burning out the Rock over High Rock on the east side of the mountain and the hollow between High Rock.

The forenoon, the Western Maryland roadmaster and a force of men fought desperately to keep it from Pen Mar, but had the rain not come their efforts would probably have been in vain.

Everything in the path of the flames suffered. The trees, the grass, the mountain burned like tinder and the underbrush really fell prey to the flames.

The spare burned over is about five square miles.

ROBBERY IN STRABAN TWP.

John H. Eckert's Home Entered and Thirty Dollars Taken from his Trousers Pocket. Garment Hanging at Bedroom.

The home of John H. Eckert in Straban township was entered some time Sunday night or Monday morning and thirty dollars taken from the trousers pocket of the garment hanging in the quilty party.

The manner from which the money was taken indicates that the door to Mr. Eckert's bed room. The door to the house was left unlocked on Sunday night and Mr. Eckert believes that the thief may have entered the room while he was in the kitchen through the money and then making his escape without being detected.

The only other theory of the robbery is that in morning when Mr. Eckert had his trousers out of the house for some time between five and seven o'clock, he discovered and took his body, making a hasty departure before he could be discovered.

AN ANONYMOUS NOTE

By HELEN V. TURNER.

(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Press Association.)

The theatrical manager received a card on which was engraved "Jules Nestrand."

The manager lapped a bell. An attendant appeared and directed to admit the visitor. The latter entered with a roll of manuscript.

"M. Nestrand," said the manager, addressing effusively and bidding both hands of the visitor in his, "I am delighted to see you."

"Pardon, sir, you have mistaken the name. It is Bronson C. Howard. I am not the author of 'Queen de Perpetre.'"

"Nor you are not, but you are a relation of the author of Howard and have come from Paris to American to have your play put on the stage under the guisture of your uncle."

The visitor stood waiting in astonishment at the manager, then said:

"Why I ask how you become aware of this?"

"I was informed by an anonymous note."

Nestrand it was agreed between my uncle and myself that I should come to America and look out for what it is intrinsically worth. Unless you will give me your promise not to betray my identity I will say no more."

"You need not go further with your work. I am ready to make you an offer for it."

"I prefer that it shall stand on its merits."

"It shall. If it is not worthy of production it shall not be forced by me on the boards. I take especial pride in the fact that the plays the plays are seen to me to be meritorious."

"But you will be very unwise to make me an offer for mine."

"Nevertheless I will accept your note would not consent to your offering an inferior play and that I should call be inferior which he had superintend

NAGLE CASE IN COUNTY COURT

Shermain Assault Case Occupys Attention of the Court. True Bills Returned in Other Cases. Other Court Business.

The regular November Court convened in the Adams County Court House on Monday.

True bills were returned in the following cases:

Com. vs. Samuel Deardorff on oath of Mary E. Taylor.

Com. vs. Clarence M. McClellan, on oath of Andrew Nagle.

Com. vs. Mike Dennge Elias Rosenwith, Adam Hauserwitch, charged with feloniously stealing from the person of Thomas Kohler.

Com. vs. Charles Keene, charged with larceny on oath of Ellen Dewees.

A nol pros was entered in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Raymond Small and Harry Longbesner, charged with burglariously entering a dwelling.

The petition to view and, if necessary, by cut a road in Cumberland township from a point in road from Robert Brown's to Pitzer's meeting house from Gettysburg to Fairfield filed and confirmed nisi at to width of 34 feet.

David Krise and William Hensel were appointed viewers for the first week and David F. Sneary and Henry G. Rahn for the second week. John A. Snyder was appointed foreman of the Grand Jury.

The first case called was that against Archibald Nagle charged with criminally assaulting Lulu Shermain near her home in Hamilton ban township on May 5. The defendant is about 17 years of age while the girl is under 16. The case is the first in Adams County Oyer and Terminer Court since the Eyler murder trial.

A large number of jurors were called and when the necessary twelve were finally secured, the following being selected: Lewis Krise, Ernest Miller, James B. Boyd, C. B. Hartman, Samuel Bream, Calvin Good, John J. Adams, Daniel Lott, Harvey Riley, George Worley, George M. Ott and E. J. Martin.

The case in all its revolting details is proving one of the most unsavory ones ever tried in local Courts it was continued all day Tuesday.

The Nagle case was completed Wednesday and at the opening of Court in the afternoon the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.

The District Attorney withdrew the case against Clarence McClellan in Adams County Court on Thursday. The Court giving as his reason that the next case taken up was that against the Aspers Implement Company with selling their companion while he slept. It will likely occupy some time.

TOWN MEN IN UGLY RUNAWAY

Levi Pitzer and Charles Cohean Thrown from Buggy when Horse Takes Fright at Trolley Car on Emmitsburg Road.

Charles H. Cohean and Levi Pitzer were participants in an ugly driving accident reported to Constable Ott Sheaffer near town on Wednesday afternoon, their horse running away on the buggy being damaged and both men sustaining slight injuries.

The men were driving out the Emmitsburg Road towards the Peach Orchard when just before the street railway car "Edgeville" coming around the short turn of the "Y" near the High Water Mark. The motorman saw that the men were in a hurry and waited for them to pass on before he then proceeded. The horse took fright when the car started to move and jumped to the side of the road.

The frightened animal kept on and finally ran over the low bank, turning the bank, upsetting the buggy and throwing out both of the occupants. Mr. Pitzer falling on Mr. Cohean. The horse was kept from further runaway and after the horse which was running full speed ran the road. It was caught by one of them men.

Mr Cohean was somewhat bruised about the legs and shoulders and the sudden shock hut is otherwise unin-jured. The buggy was slightly damaged.

The trolley car was stopped when the motorman saw that the horse was frightened.

KNOCKED DOWN BY LANDSLIDE

Edward Newman Knocked Down when Three Tons of Earth Fell upon Him. Escaped Serious Injury.

While working at excavating the large bank at the Philadelphia and Reading property along North Washington street Edward Newman was caught by a landslide and upon ground narrowly escaped serious if not fatal injuries.

The bank which is about twenty feet in height is being dug away to make room for the accommodation of teams which haul tons for shipment to the tracks back of the college property. Mr. Newman was engaged in undermining a large portion of the bank in order that the upper ground could be thrown down and work made easier.

He dug too far in however and suddenly and without warning the huge mass gave way under the heavy weight, ing at least three tons, started to slide. He jumped to the side of the excavation and thrown with great force to the ground. The sides of the landslide knocked him a little out of its path so the man would have been buried completely under the mass of earth and stone.

As almost the same time another accident occurred within a few hundred yards. John Miller, a driver for Brinkman was thrown heavily on the tracks while swinging cars and sustained a broken leg and a bruised hand. The sudden movement of some cars caused the accident.

PINK EYE IN TOWN SCHOOLS

School Children and Older People Suffering from Uncomfortable Disease. Physician Says Dos Causes Trouble.

Pink Eye is causing discomfort to scores of suffering people, old as well as young, being afflicted with the troublesome disease. As is usually the case the school children are among the first to show the unconfortable ailment.

A local physician in discussing the trouble this morning said: "I have had a number of cases of Pink Eye in town. Many children are suffering from it while a few of the 'grown ups' have come in for treatment. I attribute it principally to the high water, the dust seems to cause considerable irritation in the eyes. This, I think, is also the cause for the many cases of sore throat reported. There is little Pink Eye reported from the country."

Prof. Willis A. Bengson, Principal of the High School was out for the latter this morning and said: "I know that there are a great many cases, but the trouble in the Gettysburg schools is not at all bad. Not more than a dozen cases have come to our attention. Although it is known to be contagious I cannot believe that any pupil I have received notice from the Board of Health and as no Pink Eye cases have been reported the pupils keep on coming even though they are afflicted with the disease.

Frequently Pink Eye has spread over an entire school, showing up in many cases. This is due to the fact that one child is afflicted and the disease is brought by it to the others. The teacher here is suffering also, but it makes no duty. There is really nothing to be done for the disease. The trouble is considerable discomfort."

The parents of older pupils having inflamed eyes have been notified and the condition seems to be having a decreasing tendency. The state of affairs is not confined to Gettysburg, a number of other communities being reporting the same condition.

Good Blankets Cheap

We have told you all about our great Blanket purchase of some time ago, and a great many people have availed themselves of the saving we promised. We wouldn't have to recommend these Blankets in print, if you would come and look at them without our doing so.

The diversity and scope of this Blanket stock can best be expressed by saying, we have Blankets from 50cts up to $10 per pair, and that there is a full 20 per cent saving on every pair. That means, tocts on a 50c Blanket, a $4.00 Blanket for $3.00, a $10 Blanket for $8.00.

Whites, Greys, Scarlets, Plaids

Let us suggest that a pair of blankets make an elegant Christmas Gift for the house-keeping body.

Wool Filled Comforts, Bunting Covered Fleece Cotton Comforts--Ready to Use

Owing to the fact of our large purchases in this line months ago, we believe that our prices are less than equal qualities can be bought at elsewhere.

ADAMS COUNTY SAVES $1250

Abolishment of Spring Election Means Saving of money to Adams County. Primary Cost is Paid by the State.

The county of Adams will save about $1250 each year through the operation of the new election law and the constitutional amendment, all of which with the exception of the seventh have proved according to the latest official returns of the last election.

Under the new law Adams county, as well as the entire state, will have but one primary and one general election each year. The primary election will be held in June and the general election in November upon the days already set apart. The Pahemry election will be discontinued.

Figures in the office of the county commissioners show that the January primary election cost $1,600 and the February election of 1926 $1250.73. These are close enough to the average to indicate that these two elections cost each year on an average of about $2800. Of course the State pays the expense of the primary the county assisting the cost of the February election. Hereafter they are done away with this expense will naturally cease.

Under the new law there will be but one primary election and that each year. After that time terms of all county officers will be made to conform to election to be filled at this single election will be but a trifle more than one hundred of the present number election.

The present system is in vogue in New York and several other states and generally mens with favor.

The passage of the matter is brought out however when it is shown that within the next few years the abolition of the primary and February election, yet many will fail to receive the benefit saving election expenses. This money usually proved most welcome in these sum and they will miss it severely.

MODEL ORCHARDS IN THIS COUNTY

Pennsylvania State Superintendent of Agriculture to T. ke Five Orchards in Adams County to Use as Models.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will establish in the near future five model orchards in Adams county. Many other counties in the state will be given the same consideration.

The object is to direct, in each fruit growing district, the care of no orchard in an up to date manner, to show the public how to obtain the best result, especially in pest control.

Fruit growing farmers who will co-operate in this movement, by permitting their orchards to be used for the purpose, should write at once to Prof. H. A. Surface, state zoologist, Harrisburg, Pa., for information on the subject.

It is not proposed to take an old and totally neglected orchard and bring about a complete transformation, but to take under supervision one that is in fair condition and to care for it with expert advice and attention in regard to the management of the orchard and the suppression of pests.

It is believed that the value of the county of one successful unit in a neighborhood is beyond computation. Should the methods in his orchard prove to be the best and most profitable returns of larger yields and better fruit, his neighbors will follow in other persons adopting the methods which have proved most successful in that locality.

The owner of an orchard selected by the Bureau of Zoology will be asked to provide himself with a comparatively inexpensive sprayer with which the division will help him to demonstrate the best spraying methods. The division of zoology will outfit a plan for his orchard management in pruning, pumping, thinning of fruit, planting, cultivation, fertilization and such other practical work as may be necessary to secure the best results.

The public will be invited to visit the orchard at least three times in each year and witness demonstrations in pruning, spraying, thinning, etc., and no orchard will be accepted without a distinct understanding in that regard.

DR. F. B. WEAVER HONORED

The Philadelphia Academy of Medicine conferred its 64th honorary fellowship upon Dr. Rufus Weaver, professor of regional and applied anatomy in the Jefferson Medical College. More than 150 of Dr. Weaver's former students were present when the honors and leagues were present at the ceremony, which took place in Old Pine Street Church.

Dr. Weaver is a graduate of Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, in the class of 1893. He studied under Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, and was for a time connected with Hahnemann. Among his many contributions to science, he was selected to be the dissection of the entire cerebro-spinal nervous system which is the most complicated of all its kind in existence.

Dr. Rufus B. Weaver was born January 15, 1861, and reared in Gettysburg. He is a son of the late Jacob Samuel Weaver, of West Middle street. He has a brother, George, who lives in Gettysburg, and a nephew, Rufus, is an assistant professor here.

All the older residents here remember Dr. Weaver as a boy who displayed at the honor conferred upon him.

SELL-TYPER

F. X. Noel, of Somersville, and Miss Anastasia Topper, daughter of Joseph Topper, of Littlestown, were married at 8 a. m. Wednesday morning at a nuptial mass in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Mechanicstown, by Rev. Father Sentner.

Sale Register

On Monday, in Washington, D. C., Edward C. Bayly, of Harrisburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Tate Bayly, of York street, was united in marriage to Miss Ada Virginia Hamilton, of Richmond, Va., by the Rev. J. Fredwick Wenckel, Mr. and Mrs. Bayly will make their home in Harrisburg.

Miss Ida Weikert, of Gettysburg, spent Sunday with Katie Weikert, of Orrtanna.

Harry Gettier and Samuel Linard, of Table Rock, spent Sunday at the home of A. S. Mills, Berlin.

Mrs. D. D. Barnes, of Hanover, is spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. William Rose, of route 2.

There will be spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Weaver, route 9 were as follows: Jeremy Noel and wife, of Heidlersburg; Mrs. Charles Gilinger and mother, Mrs. Sarah, of New Oxford; Mrs. Nolan Ler and son, Joseph, of Bonneauville; Harry Weaver, wife and family; Messrs. George and Augustus Hoff, Oliver Barnes, Charles Small and Bernard Partridge.

Emanuel Adams, wife and daughter Margaret, of route 33, spent Saturday and Sunday at Taneytown.

John Weaver, of route 9, has purchased a fine pair of bay mules.

Howard Spangler, of route 31, has a horse suffering with the disease called right hind pneumo. The injury was caused by a runaway team which overturned while descending a hill. Efforts are being made to save the animal.

Miss Marguerite Bushman, of Gettysburg, spent Sunday with Misses Delta and Virginia Albright, of route 6.

John Newhaler and wife, of route 33, attended the funeral of Mrs. Ott in Gettysburg on Monday.

Miss Ray Cline and sister spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Newhaler on route 15.

Miss Valora Forney spent one day recently with Mr. and Mrs. John Newhaler on route 15.

J. Caron Smith, of route 8, purchased a dog of H. S. Conover.

Marvin Miller, of route 8, was on a hunting trip to the mountains one day last week.

Howard Schwartz, of route 1, was on the sick list the beginning of this week, but is able to be about again.

Miss Ruth Sentman, of route 6, is improving his premises by laying a cement walk.

A tragedy was narrowly averted at the home of H. V. Kepner on route 6, Wednesday morning, when a four year old son, hearing a team at the barn supposed a shot gun at what he supposed were thieves. They proved to be only corn hunters. It is suggested that children be given cast iron banks instead of nearly farmers of their wherebouts and thus avoid accidents.

P. H. Bixler and Jonas Forney, of route 8, had a very successful hunting expedition last week.

Alonzo Steinwitz, of Philadelphia, spent Sunday with relatives and family and other friends on route 31.

Most of the farmers on route 4, are busy husking corn. The yield is said to be handing fodder. The corn yield is better than expected.

Howard Gahr, of Harrisburg, who has been visiting at the home of Harry Hoover on route 15, was taken suddenly ill, remaining t fact, 5 inches.

Mrs. Jacob Forney and Miss Maud Crouse, of route 8, spent Thursday in town on business.

Mrs. Hench, of route 18, spent Thursday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jacob Forney, who has been ailing for some time.

Mrs. James Crouse, both of route 18.

Mrs. Blanche Hoffman, of route 18, spent Thursday in town on business.

Mrs. Harry Flemming, Mrs. George Hughes and daughter, spent Wednesday at the home of Mrs Rosie Shindle on route 8. Mrs. Shindle's daughter son are now spending a few days at the home of Samuel Hoffman on route 8.

Mr. and Mrs. John Herr and family of Lancaster, are visiting at the home of his brother, Frank Herr on route 8.

Mrs. Garfield Jacobs, of route 8, has been ill for some time of what happened.

Mrs. F. A. Weaver and sister, Miss Rose Cassell, of route 18, spent Tuesday in Harrisburg.

Gettysburg Rural Route Happenings

What the People living on the Routes Starting from Gettysburg are Doing. Those who are Visiting and Entertaining Friends.

J. W. Miring, of route 31 has purchased the property of Mrs. Bertha L. Harbaugh in Cumberland township for $900. It was formerly the property of Mrs. Peter Bollinger.

Messrs. John Frommyer, Joseph A. Fegan, Augustine L. Fegan, all of New York, Lawrence Frommyer, of Columbia and Leo Frommyer, of Bonneauville have been spending the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Frommyer, of route 9. They had a very successful hunting trip, having in their game bag when they departed, 24 rabbits, 8 grey squirrels, 1 wood chuck and 1 quail.

Work is being done on the new road near Stone Jug Hill on route 8.

The Waldo Hilterbrick sons and the Boyd Brothers, of route 8, are hauling straw for Taneytown.

Mrs. William E. Rose, of route 8, is spending a week in Hanover.

Rev. D. T. E. Stockdale and wife made a business trip to Gettysburg Friday.

J. D. Clapsaddle, of route 18, made a business trip to York. He sold his property to Mr. Lenox of York.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Mills, of route 18, and Miss Helen Mills of Philadelphia, spent Friday with H. H. Black of route 4.

Robert Brothers of route 2 are roofing their barn. William E. Rose and J. D. Clapsaddle are doing the work.

J. T. Ecker and E. S. Kelly, of route 5, spent Thursday in Taneytown by way of Gettysburg.

Mrs. Charles Rosensteel, of route 4, who has been quite ill is improving slowly. Dr. Jacobs is attending her.

Mrs. Jacob Sheads, wife and daughter Mrs. Jacobs, sister, Hannah and little son, spent Friday night with Charles Jacobs on route 6.

Mrs. Nannie Wood and daughters of Maryland are visiting her sister, Mrs. Ted Jacobs on route 6.

A very enjoyable surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Plank of route 4, in honor of their son, Harry, it being his 20th birthday. In the evening was spent in playing various games. Refreshments were then passed to the guests and singsongs. At a late hour the guests departed for their homes, leaving room where the table was laden with the delicacies of the season. There were 106 present as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Plank. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Plank and son, Mrs. Charles Topper, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Topper, Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, Sr., and Mrs. Charles Stallsmith, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Miller, Mrs. Emma Bruce, Louise Miller, Viola Andrews, Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, Mrs. Lizzie Miller, Sallie Crick, Edie Schwartz, Nancy Sadler, Annie Hemgy, Blanche Stallsmith, Lester Lee Seymour, Mrs. Bruce, Bertha Swisher, Mary Hemgy, Mrs. Charles Stallsmith, Mrs. Myrtle Topper, Ellen Plank, Mary Study, Mrs. Ida Stallsmith, Mrs. Mary Study, Ruth Bauer, Bettie Sykes, Bessie Sentman, Mrs. Charles Sentman, Mrs. Carrie Miller, Grace Sykes, Lewis Mandorff, Rosie Riley, Raymond Sentman, Mrs. Mary Sykes, Mrs. Harry Bauer, Ben Little, Ida Robert, Mrs. Ida Robert, Mrs. Mary Sentman, Messrs. Home Course In Live Stock Farming

VII.—Silos and Silage.

THERE is no feed on the farm that is more economical than silage. An thirteen tons of green feed can be produced to the acre, when made into silage this is practically canned and will keep in good condition all winter. Stock is in the pink of condition on succulent feed during the winter. Indeed, food of this kind is essential if the greatest possible profits are to be obtained. Many supplies received fed in the shotgun and most convenient form. It is an especially valuable feed for dairy cows. Twenty-five to thirty pounds per day will help to keep the milk yields up to a point where profits could be counted on pasture. A silo is indispensable on the dairy farm. It means economical conditions all the year round.

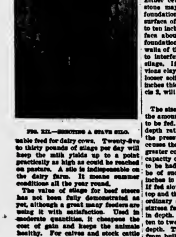

FIG. XII.—SHOOTING A SILVER SILO.

The value of silage for beef steers has not been fully demonstrated as yet, although it is used many farmers for using it with satisfaction. Used in connection with meal, it cheapens the cost of gain and keeps the animals healthy. For fattening lambs silage is again a fine succulent feed, keeping them healthy and cheaper gains than could be produced in any other way.

All kinds of sheep do well on silage. It is a great help for dogs if fed in moderation, and chickens are very fond of it.

The main consideration in locating the silo is to have it convenient. Most of the silage will probably be fed to dairy cows and the place for the silo will be at the end of the cow barn. Feeding chutes can be arranged down to the silo for feeding silage to young stock.

Wooden Silos.

There are several types of silos. Many of the first silos put up were built of 2 inch lumber studded and sided on the outside. This made a very good silo, but one that was altogether too expensive. A later and more popular silo is the stave silo. This is made much the same as a wooden tank, consists of hard staves held in place by hoops, with a row of doors on one side. Stave silos are used more extensively at present than any other type. They are cheap, easy to erect and fairly durable. This last depends largely upon the kind of wood used on the outside. The most lasting kind of wood used. White pine and hemlock are the most materials for staves. They will last twenty years or more. Cypress, chestnut, birch and hard pine are all durable woods for the purpose. Whatever kind of lumber is used it should be of the best quality, straight grained, sound and free from loose knots. A stave silo should be kept well painted on the outside. It must be anchored solidly with guy rods at will, blow over easily when empty. The hoops will need to be tightened in the summer time when the lumber shrinks and loosened again when the silo is filled.

Cement and Tile Silos.

Concrete is used to a considerable extent in silo construction. If properly put up a concrete silo is practically indestructible. Rings must be well enforced with steel wire and must be put up by some one who understands the business if they are to be satisfactory. Hoop forms serve in a measure than in a stave silo. A double walled cement silo does not keep the silage position, although it increases the cost considerably. With the recent high prices of lumber, however, a good double walled concrete silo does not greatly exceed a good stave silo of the same size in cost.

Stone, brick and cement blocks are all used to good with good results. The main thing is to get them laid accurately and properly reinforced.

A silo made of timber building tile is getting good satisfaction at the Iowa experiment station. These tiles are laid in cement, being put together right wise. The resulting dead air space is very effective in preserving freezing. When lined with a coating of cement such a silo is air and moisture proof. It is as durable and satisfactory as a double walled concrete silo, costs less, and there is less risk of failure due to improper erection.

Details of Construction.

While the silo should be located as close to the barn as possible, it is not advisable to put it inside the barn. It takes up room that is needed more for other purposes, is unhandy to fill, and the odor of the silage is objectionable. Times will be some other way, but not so much when the silo is located outside the barn. A handy method of construction is to connect the silo with the feed way of the barn by a narrow chute which extends the full height of the silo. The chute can be thrown down this chute and carried into the barn. Sometimes doors at frequent intervals the chute. The object is to avoid the mistake in making silo doors is in constructing them in a solid way, thus making it unhandy to get out and in. The doors must be built in such a way the doors fit snugly, as the silo must be practically air tight if the silage is to keep well. A silo is really a big box and should be nothing else if it is less than canned corn. The crevices of silos doors may be filled with wet clay before the silage is put in, or building paper may be pasted over the doors.

Another point to look to is to see that the inner walls are as smooth as possible, as the silage settles somewhat unevenly. Uneven settling means air spaces and spoiled silage.

Stone masonry can be saved in building a silo by laying it upward from the floor like the surface of the ground. If deeper than this it will be best to excavate for the silage cut. Either cement, hard burned brick or stone may be used for the walls of foundation. The foundation up to the surface of the ground should be from six to ten inches thick, with a bearing surface about four inches wider. This foundation should be deep with the walls of the silo on the bottom, so as not to interfere with the setting of the silage. If put in of hard, loose devices clay no floor will be needed. In loose soil a floor is nothing else but a lurbes thick, made as described in article 4.

Size of the Silo.

The size of the silo will depend upon the amount of stock to which silage is to be fed. It is best to get one from depth rather than from diameter, as the pressure due to additional depth causes the silage to keep better. This greater compactness also increases the capacity of the silo. If fresh silage is to be fed it will cause the stock more or less of such a size that at least two inches in depth will be fed each day. If fed slower than this it will spoil on the top and the value will be reduced. An ordinary size for a quarter section is one twenty feet in diameter and forty feet in depth. If more capacity is wanted the diameter may be added to the depth. The following table, condensed from bulletin No. 130 of the Iowa experiment station, gives the capacity of silos of various sizes:

Inside Diameter.	Height.	Cubic Contents.	Average Number of Tons Silage.	Pounds Fed Daily.
12	30	3,393	71	1,000
12	35	3,958	83	1,000
12	40	4,523	95	1,000
14	30	4,618	97	1,500
14	35	5,388	113	1,500
14	40	6,158	129	1,500
16	30	6,032	126	2,000
16	35	7,037	148	2,000
16	40	8,043	169	2,000
18	30	7,634	160	2,500
18	35	8,906	187	2,500
18	40	10,179	214	2,500
20	30	9,425	198	3,000
20	35	10,996	231	3,000
20	40	12,566	264	3,000

The following table from the same bulletin gives the approximate amounts of silage needed per day by the various kinds of animals:

Kind of stock.	Pounds.
Dairy cows	30-40
Calves	8-10
Fattening cattle	30-40
Dairy cattle	20-30
Sheep	4-6

Corn is the principal silage crop because of its yield and feeding value. It should be cut for silage just as the ears are well dented. If cut too early poor silage will result. If left longer it will be too dry to pack well. This can be tested by running water into the silo as it is being filled. A wind blower is by far the most satisfactory means of getting the silage from the cutter to the top of the silo. A long canvas tube extending down into the silo keeps the silage well mixed. Tramping the silage thoroughly as it is put in is one of the secrets of having it keep well. It should be unevenly well tramped around the edges. After the silo is filled a few cats may be scattered around on tops. These will sprout, forming an air tight cover. Some prefer to cover the last the few inches of silage from spoiling.

Home Course In Live Stock Farming

VIII.—Managing the Dairy Farm.

By C. V. GREGORY,
Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture," "Money in the Farm," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

WHEN properly carried on dairying is one of the most profitable branches of live stock farming. The work is somewhat confining, but there is no serious objection as long as the profits keep coming. As shown by the census dairying removes less fertility from the farm than any other branch of live stock farming. Dairying in addition to many profitable returns generally forming cause be carried on. Low land or that too hilly to be cultivated can be made very profitable pasture for dairy cows. There is little danger of the dairy business being overdone. As population increases, the demand for dairy products becomes greater. The dairy cow produces food more economically than any other class of farm animals.

In starting in the dairy business the type of cow to select will depend largely on conditions. Near the great cities, where dairying is more or less of a side issue, the dairy cow of many advocates. They give a fair amount of milk and produce calves that feed into satisfactory beef animals. The worst problem with dual purpose cows is that they cannot be bred true to type with any degree of certainty. Once in awhile an extra good one will be found, but there is no certainty about the calves from being like her. They tend to go either to the beef or dairy type. A whole herd of dual purpose cows is very hard to breed to obtain and to keep when it has been secured.

Selecting the Cows.

If dairying is to be the prominent feature of its farming operations it will pay to go into one of the pure bred dairy breeds. These special purpose dairy cows are not handsome, filling out milk, and the best cows do it effectively and in a pleasing way. There is little choice between breeds. The Jersey gives very rich milk, but are small in size and cannot stand unfavorable conditions well. Holsteins are hardier, larger and can use more rough feed to advantage. They can also be turned into quick and profitable beef, and their milk, while not quite so more skimmilk for calves and pigs. Where milk is sold the cream and skimmings of fat is a disadvantage. Guernseys are also fine dairy cows. They give a little more milk with a little richer quality than the Jersey, but are not quite so popular.

Far more important than breed is individuality. There are three things to be taken into consideration when selecting a dairy cow—type, performance and pedigree. The dairy type is now generally recognized as being wedge shaped. That is, the cow should be large in the rear and small in front. The three most important points to look for are constitution and capacity. The skin should be pliable and not adhere closely to the flesh. A coarse animal is seldom a satisfactory milk and butter producer. The skin should be no tendency to lay on fat. A dairy cow is not a beef animal. The feeding most of her life and must have a strong constitution to stand the strain on the strain. This is indicated by a strong chest and large barrel.

The capacity of the cow is of two kinds—somewhat related, however. She must have good digestive capacity. This is shown by a large barrel, in order to be able to bestow enough room for the digestion of the rich material for a large milk yield. Milk producing capacity is indicated by a large, well developed, udder, as in no individual of a large milk flow. Some cows have a tendency to secrete too large for their milk producing capacity, while others are the other way. The most convenient producer of milk is obtained when these two are balanced. The term should be long and well placed for convenience in milking.

By far the most important point in selecting a cow is her performance record. This shows just how much milk and butter she can produce in a year. Dairy farmers for feeding cows will be given later.

The selection of a dairy cow is valuable mainly for the performance records of her ancestors. The record of her grandmother on her sire's side is especially important, as a good sire is more liable to transmit her qualities through her sons than through her daughters.

Another point that should not be neglected, especially if milk or cream is being sold, is buying cows subject to the tuberculin test. It is definitely known that tuberculosis can be transmitted from cows to man through the milk. It will pay to keep only cows that are known to be free from disease. In the hands of an experienced veterinarian the tuberculin test may be relied on to give satisfactory results.

Selecting the Bull.

The selection of a bull to head the herd is of fully as great importance as the selection of the cows. The latter points to look for in a dairy bull are mainly those mentioned characters of barrel. He should be of good disposition. He should not be too fleshy, especially in a strong breed and a thick neck. A heavy fleshy bull is apt to be sluggish and will not have the ability to reproduce his species to the best advantage to any degree of certainty. The bull's ancestors are important. The performance records of his mother and other female ancestors are very good indications of the inherent milk producing qualities that he possesses.

In most cases it pays to breed dairy cows for dairying. The greatest milk flow will then come in the winter, when there is no field work to do. Then when grass comes the milk flow is diminished, and the cow is kept up to her maximum production for the longest possible time. When cows that calve in the spring are put on dry feed they fall off in their milk yield rapidly and the total yearly product lessened.

The cow should be well fed up to at least three weeks before calving. Even if she is not giving a considerable quantity of milk. She will come through the period of caring in enough better shape to make up for the milk lost in a day or two previous to calving she should be shut up by herself in a comfortable box, loosening and cooling feeds, such as bran mashes and flaxseed meal, should be given. Some one should stay up with the cow for the first few days to render any assistance that may be necessary. Sometimes the cow is in good health she will usually have no difficulty. The worst troubles to be met with bred dairy cows are subject is milk fever, which is described in article 5. The calf should be given the first milk, as this will start the digestive system to working. The milk will be all right to use for the calf as soon as if the cow is not sick. Until that time the calf may be allowed to suck.

Disposing of the Calves.

The question of what to do with the calves is a important one on the dairy farm. The heifers should generally be saved, as new cows will be needed to replace some of the cows in the herd. The bull calves will usually sell at good prices. Probably the best way to dispose of them is to sell as veal calves. After they are from ten days to two weeks old they should be changed to skimmilk gradually, taking two or three days to do so. Feed in small quantities at first and add to the amount, if it is not being fed to excess. The calf will soon learn to eat heartily. The calves should be fed up to about three weeks before calving. Even if she is not giving a considerable quantity of milk. She will come through the period of caring in enough better shape to make up for the milk lost in a day or two previous to calving she should be shut up by herself in a comfortable box, loosening and cooling feeds, such as bran mashes and flaxseed meal, should be given. Some one should stay up with the cow for the first few days to render any assistance that may be necessary. Sometimes the cow is in good health she will usually have no difficulty. The worst troubles to be met with bred dairy cows are subject is milk fever, which is described in article 5. The calf should be given the first milk, as this will start the digestive system to working. The milk will be all right to use for the calf as soon as if the cow is not sick. Until that time the calf may be allowed to suck.

Feed in small quantities at first and add to the amount, if it is not being fed to excess. The calf will soon learn to eat heartily. The calves should be kept growing fat all the time. Feed on skimmilk, feeds or feed of any kind in large quantities will cause them to be become fat. If the tendency to lay on fat at 6. Feed to veal, they will be able to continue to fatten after she is ten weeks of age.

In order to tell just which cows are the most profitable it pays to keep a record of them. The most practicable way for a to do is to weigh the milk for six consecutive milkings once a month and test the same three months. Multiplying the average of these six weights by the number of days in one month gives the amount of milk produced during the month. To determine the amount of fat in the milk a Babcock tester is the most handy of the six milkings. Before taking the milk weighed it should be well mixed by pouring from one dish to another several times. The samples should be proportioned to the size of the milking. In warm weather a formaldehyde tablet should be put in the milk to keep it from spoiling until it can be tested. Most creamerymen are glad to do testing for their patrons or you can do it yourself with a small hand tester. A four bottle tester, with equipment for testing, can be bought for about $6. Directions for testing will be given in article 10.

ESTIMATING THE WHEAT.

Probabilities of the Outcome of a Very Interesting Season.

The wheat season starts with small, or reserves even then in the famous year 1901 when low supplies of old wheat, followed by a 20 per cent short, ago. The European crop and a 200,000,000 bushel crop in our own, and some remarkable financial results. This means an early and quick demand for the new crop. It is impossible as yet to estimate the probable foreign wheat harvest of 1902; latest advices indicate that the crop in Russia, France, England and Rumania will be sufficient. Germany and Austria-Hungary have suffered badly, so that the total European crop will probably not be much greater yield of 1900 and 1901. The obvious meaning of such a situation is that Europe must look as much of our wheat surplus as the American market will spare and must pay fair prices for it. Should the present excellent outlook Aug. 14 continued the 400,000,000 bushel probable surplus will be exceeded before, instead of relating the calculation to the domestic needs, the surplus wheat possible here in any way accurately ascertained. Europe would scarcely have escaped a later reputation of the first week in September of mid-May and our export trade would have been practically restricted. But 32,000,000 acres tumbles make a considerable difference.

It still remains to see what happens to our spring wheat and to the foreign crops in the two remaining months. What is marketed, however, there are several reasonable inferences.

First, the American farmer will sell as substantially as in 1897 of 1898 of remunerative prices; second, those prices are not likely to go up to the "famine figure," which will impose hardship on consumers; third, the mid-crops will have the average amount of wheat in transport at seaboard, in effect, our export of wheat and flour, which in the last twelve months was cut down 50,000,000 bushels from the year before and 75,000,000 from two years ago, should be increased by twenty-five to forty millions, thereby helping our market for international exchange and at the same time making the strain on Europe's wheat trade.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

Saddle grafting is used for small plants, the stock being cut to a wedge end the scion cut and put upon the wedge. In cleft grafting of the stock plant the tops are cut off and split diametrally and held together, being tied together and the soil well worked. It is useful for soft or tender wood which will not stand of splitting.

By squeezing the roosters from the hens after the breeding season the sexual vitality or breeders will be strengthened. If however, they are left killing their feathers they will not fight and will soon become quarrelsome with each other.

A horse that will work steadily five miles an hour will cover the same ground in a day that a much less active one that trots half the time. We do not always appreciate the value and capability of good, fast walkers.

Land horned over almost always comes on with an inferior growth such as grey birch, wild cherry and soft maple. But often after the more hopeful chances for cheap improvement through cropping or planting pieces sod cutting the other trees to a few years.

An odor will be observed in the milk if allege be fed or cows a short time before milking, but if given shortly after milking the slight smell cannot be detected.

It will seem a loss to the farmer to have the cow afraid of him, it is a loss every time she is frightened. To run a cow to pasture is like throwing money away. A cow has in any way worried will not do her best. The cow that is made a pet of will make enough for its owner. The milk of a frightened or worried cow is poisonous.

Pay an occasional friendly visit to the little trees set this spring. Dull and unnecessary sprouts and moles are more that no loss of time have been left on the trees to choke them.

Nearly every farmer has more or less tillage land that is too sour for best crop production. He would try the effect of lime on an acre or two if he knew that the supposed great power of lime can be spread easily on land without any objectionable effects on the user or any troublesome preparation of the material used.

A good horse and wagon, neat clothes, clean carriage and polite manner temporarily go with a choice retail trade in farm products.

Millions of Onions.

Fourteen million bushels of onions were raised in the United States last year, and as a result the demand that 1,400,000 bushels more were imported from Spain, Holland, Germany and the south sea islands. The value of America's crop is $14,000,000, while the department of agriculture believes that the latter may be worth twice as much. It has just issued a bulletin on the subject. It says remember to the average farmer and truck grower that they are overlooking the onion crop as if any one could do such a thing. For many years the vegetable has thrived only in the valleys and lowlands, but improved agricultural methods have made it possible to raise it with profit on the hillsides. The Bermuda variety is being grown with success in Florida in all of the southern states, especially along the gulf coast. Each succeeding year brings new ideas as to marketing, and the onion is becoming the food in demand in fact from the egg in the pot.

ANOTHER TOWN HOME ENTERED

Home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Baughman on West Middle Street Burglarized of Money and Jewelry. Entered by Front Door.

An entrance was gained to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis G. Baughman, 230 West Middle street, Tuesday night and four o'clock Tuesday morning and about $10 in cash and a gold watch taken from Mr. and Mrs. Baughman's bedroom.

As in the other burglaries which have taken place in town during the past few weeks the entrance was easily to be after money and small valuables only, though he overlooked a gold watch, gold necklace, and two rings which were near the ring taken.

The burglar gained entrance through the front door, the thief pushing out the key on the inside and then inserting his own from the street, opening up the door in which Mr. and Mrs. Baughman were asleep the room from Mr. Baughman's trousers pocket a purse containing $15.00. The garment was lying on a chair right next to the bed. The gold watch and ring were then taken from the bureau, Mrs. Baughman's purse and ring overlooking the other valuables.

The thief evidently left the house by the same and had on the inside the initials E. W. and J. R. L. and could be identified by Mr. Baughman if he has been notified the authorities and jewelers to be on the lookout for it.

Mr. Baughman is positive that the burglary got in the house between three and four o'clock Mrs. Baughman got up and took care of the children in the evening but when they returned found the house locked as they left it. They also noticed that at about every thing when they went to bed and next morning found the key on the shelves in the front room and the door standing pretty open. Mrs. Baughman was awake about three o'clock and shortly afterward heard their pet dog bark considerably but thought nothing of it.

There is no clue to the burglar.

HAD FIRE ON DAY OF SALE

Charles B. Mundorff Loses Outbuilding Containg All His Harness. Quantity of Meat and Many other Articles in Midnight Blaze.

Codorus Nov. 13—Charles B. Mundorff, of Franklin township, had the hard luck early Saturday morning of having an outhouse burn with a large number of the things which he had purchased at public sale the day later in the day. Notwithstanding this loss he was not completely ruined one.

The building which burned was situated among other things all of the harness in Mr. Mundorff's possession. When it came to having harness the man had to lead them out without collars but the large number who stored at the sale soon helped him out at his predicament. The horses brought good prices as did also the cows. One boss brought $213 and a cow $60.00.

The meat on the fat hog which had been butchered on Wednesday of last week was one of the things to burn. The butchering had taken place in the building which burned and it is thought that some of the coals from Wednesday's work set the building on fire. Mr. Mundorff's loss will be about $1,000 with no insurance.

ERECTING NEW $10,000 BUILDING

Handsome New Structure Containing Dining Hall For Seminary Students being Erected on the Hill. Dwelling for Cora Taker of Building.

Work has been started on the erection of a new $10,000 building to be used by the large number of the seminary structures comprising the plant of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary. The building will be of brick with a fine refectory and will be about 60 feet long.

The building will be two stories in height and the entire North side will be used for dining hall. The kitchen accommodations will be about 20x15 feet and will have the entire height of the building, the ceiling being 16 feet high.

The South side of the building will be occupied by the family who will have the care of the building in their charge and who will have charge of the meals which will be served to the students who will dine in the dining room. The dwelling part of the structure will be 30 feet square.

The building which will be placed on the West side of the avenue will be of brick to correspond with the present and will have a granite foundation. It will be heated by steam throughout and be in keeping with the other buildings of the Seminary campus. Dempwolf, of York, who has designed a number of the buildings is town, is the architect.

The need for such a building has long been felt by the professors and students at the institution on the hill. It is a long walk for the Seminarians to take to their meals at the seminarily breakfast,a walk which is particularly disagreeable when the cold winds blow chill and cold" and the walk to the dining hall is especially hard for those who are pursuing studies there.

The building will be used for exercises at the institution, and no contract is being given out for the erection of the entire building.

MANY SUDDEN DEATHS

From Poisonous Rheumatism

Rheumatism has for years been regarded as an exceedingly painful disease but it has only been recently discovered in the last few years that it is this terrible torture that is the direct cause of literally causing thousands of deaths yearly throughout our country. Rheumatism kills more people than Heart Disease, Paralysis, Uric Acid Poisoning or among the most dangerous forms of this disease is of Uric Acid is allowed to stay in the system the poisons of the blood can be averted, but if any sufferer will go at once to L. H. Buehler, and get a bottle of "BLOOD LIFE" they will be surprised at its thorough action. They will positively be cured. BLOOD LIFE is a positive cure for the most obstinate cases where there is acute or chronic rheumatism. Don't delay, but go at once to L. H. Buehler. "BLOOD LIFE TREATMENT" should be used with "BLOOD LIFE."

SAW FAMOUS HORSE

Robert S. Brown, of Cumberland township, writes the following from Buffalo, New York, to The News:

During my visit to this place I saw the pioneer of trotting horses "Hambletonian" and meeting his owner, Mr. Taylor, who is a fine looking man and is evidently also a lover of good horses, having owned "Mascot" when he had a 2:18 trotting record for pacers.

Though Hambletonian has a national reputation for good horses and "Mambrino" is now past twenty years he is still called "King of the Turf-in-Buffalo-way" and always heads the procession at the annual parade of the Grand Encampment's Road Drivers Association. He is the most general race at the meetings here this season.

"Mabrolio" is well known in Adams County having been owned and driven speed in his colthood days by our towns people, Jesse L. Ewen, and by the great sire of Loshirian and a few others in the county.

Yours truly,
Robert S. Brown.

A LITERARY AFFAIR.

By ARTHUR D. BERWICK.
Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.]

It was a pretty town, but inordinately dull. The branches of the creek formed a half moon, and the houses were rather rustic—giving in summer a delicious shade. But few people walked on them, so where they were the fosters it wounded used. In winter they were frozen and the town was covered the ground, and even wheels could not be heard.

He went there in midsummer. He didn't go because he was sick—he went to go. There was a deal on, and he was the manager of the other end. His work was principally waiting for telegrams. He broke up the monotony by what they sowed and for instructions. The town possessed a public library. He went there for something to read. The room was dark and cool, reserve inside, logs thieving in a broad tiled fireplace. The librarian, a girl of twenty, stepped to the desk.

"I would like a book to read," he said. "I'm cursed up here with little to do and have never been here."

There were books on the desk which he took up and scanned listlessly.

"What book would you like?" asked the librarian.

"I haven't the slightest idea."

"Don't you like love and rock over there?"

"Couldn't you suggest something?"

"Fiction?"

"Yes."

"Have you read 'Robinson Crusoe?'"

"Yes, when a boy. Why should I read that now?"

"Then you don't like fiction, I suppose; you are above here. You might have some suggestion from him as to how to entertain yourself."

"Thank you; I'd rather read this. The librarian 'blushed.' 'I'll read the letter in reconsidering books to you.'

"Then I'll read the rock over there."

"You'll read the rock over there?"

"Yes."

HARROW ESCAPE

George Crown, mail carrier on Gettysburg route, 4 at noon on Tuesday drove his team up beside the large telephone pole in front of Hunterstown, in Highland township, whicked the large iron rod on the pole, received the mail, jumped into his cart and just as he passed the next pole both large poles dropped flat to the road without a moment's notice. Three inches later in front of the stores the horse would have been killed and Mr. Crone hurt. Mrs. Ida Myers had passed the pole and was on the store steps as the pole fell and Mr. W. H. Crone, the new proprietor at Keystone Hills, was just coming up towards the pole when it fell before him. In all three cases several seconds sooner or later would have caused serious trouble. Both poles were entirely decayed at the ground, and without half the heavy wind storms all fall and in the calm when a leaf was moving both poles dropped at one and the same moment.

CLEANING OUT CUSTOM HOUSE

Six Inspectors Suspended as Result of Sugar Fraud.

75 OTHERS ARE ACCUSED

Collector Loeb Will Make a Thorough Job of the Housecleaning and Will Be Backed Up by Washington.

New York, Nov. 16.—Four customs inspectors formerly employed as examiners at sugar weighers were suspended by Collector Loeb at the order of Secretary Shaw. Two other inspectors who were charged with accepting tips on the docks. The collector refused to discuss the charges against men but he served at once with the charges against them and the suspension will be made permanent if the charges are proved.

The four cases in which Collector Loeb acted are only the beginning of a general housecleaning in the local office. There are a large number of similar cases under consideration, and the collector expected to act upon these within a very short time. The number of employes of the local customs service who are known to have been suspected by the authorities on the ground arose every day, and it is now estimated that between seventy-five and a hundred men in the classified and unclassified service are to get the same order. It is said the evidence against them is now in the hands of the Treasury department. Some of the men under suspicion or against whom information has been obtained will be charged with accepting tips, but in large number of cases will be given the choice to accompany the counsel against the sugar trust. It is believed that before very long there will be radical changes in the force in the customs and others will be placed on the docks, in connection with the custom service. It is also pointed out that Collector Loeb since taking office has been acting but on part of the horde of officials men employed in the local service.

Wilbur F. Wakeman, former appraiser of the port, pointed out through Washington, where he had a long talk with Secretary Shaw and Treasurer Roth Vreeh, during which the sugar inquiry was gone over at length. According to Mr. Wakeman, the housecleaning will be a very thorough job. He said:

"I believe that Secretary MacVeagh will clean up the service as it has never been cleaned up before. I talked with him about this situation, and I know that he will stand by Collector Loeb absolutely."

LIPTON WILL TRY AGAIN TO LIFT CUP

Sir Thomas Says He Will Issue a Challenge.

TO SET 1911 FOR CONTEST

British Sportsman Says Under Present Rules He Would Not Have a Chance to Win, and That Would Not Be Sport.

Sir Thomas Lipton will challenge for a new or the America's cup, to be sailed in 1911. Sir Thomas made this announcement before sailing for the United States from Southampton, New York.

Sir Thomas has been here for several weeks to learn the attitude of the people and the New York yacht club on the question of modification of the deed of gift governing the America's cup contests. He has received such assurances, if any, he received before sailing. Before sailing, Sir Thomas said:

"I will challenge for the cup in 1911. I am sure the New York yacht club will give the question full consideration when I inform them that I do not wish for an exclusive date for a race. I do not want to race in 1910 because next summer had it been possible to get a race that year.

"If the New York yachtsmen insist on a challenge under the present deed governing international cup races, I will challenge for the cup, and that would not be sport. I shall bear in mind that I do not wish to put a boat to conform as far as possible with the deed."

Members of the New York Yacht club say that the Lipton cup challenge had been formally laid before the club and that formal action will be made regarding its acceptance. Generally speaking, it is the opinion that the old racing rules should govern contests for the America's cup.

Philadelphia Trust Company Fails.

The Manufacturers' Trust company, of Philadelphia, doing business at Broad and Girard avenue, closed its doors. This was done at the request of the state banking department. Mr. Boyd and a state bank examiner, A. L. Tyler, are in charge pending a receiver. The trouble is said to have been caused by heavy withdrawals.

The banking commissioners' report sets forth that the company is "in an unsafe and unsound condition to do business," and is believed to be insolvent. The commissioners state that the crux of dissolution will be asked for by the directors of the bank, the fact that disclosures will be made in court.

A substantial depositor of the concern, however, declares that "depositors' securities was no doubt meant to protect." He declares that the trust company had made to a concern man who failed for $1,000,000. This will cause many said to have been arrested in connection with the failure.

The trust company's capital is $500,000, with deposits of $2,000,000. Its assets amount to $2,500,000. Only $15,000 in cash was on hand in the vaults.

MRS. STETSON PUT OUT OF CHURCH

Officially Expelled by Heads of Christian Science.

CLIMAX TO BITTER FIGHT

Charges of Working Against the Interests of the Church and Contrary to Its Teachings Declared to Be True.

Boston, Nov. 16.—The name of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, formerly first reader of the Christian Science church of New York, was dropped from the rolls of the Mother church Saturday by order of the board of directors.

It was announced that the directors have found the charges that Mrs. Stetson was working against the interests of the church, and contrary to the teachings and practices of Christian Science, to be proved and true.

The action of the directors of the Mother church marks the close of the history of Christian Science, besides being important for the general understanding of Mrs. Stetson, who is pastor emeritus of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of New York, where she has a large following.

The case has been watched for some months by the followers in this city, and two months ago Mrs. Stetson's name was dropped from the list of those by her students, who also are leaders in the movement in the local and rival journals of the denomination.

Mrs. Stetson's chief rival and followers in New York had rallied to her support and an investigation ordered by a special committee of the New York church. This resulted in the convocation and was immediately followed by a demand for the resignation of the church, a majority of whom upheld the charges. Mrs. Stetson refused to leave; to dismiss the present first reader, Mrs. Stetson.

The letter from Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the founder of the faith of Christian Science faith, was read at a meeting held in this city on last Monday, at which action was expected. Mrs. Eddy's letter resulted in a unanimous vote on the question the meeting adjourned.

Since then Mrs. Stetson has obeyed the instructions of the board of directors of the mother church, and appeared before them in this city.

BLACK HAND MAKES MAN A MANIAC

Driven From Home He Becomes Violent on Train.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 16.—One of the Black Hand bombs recently threw out of St. Joseph, Mo., by their desperate enemy, has driven a Pittston Scottish crazy.

Accompanied by his wife and son, when the family, bound for Italy, reached New York, the son left the car so violent that three special officers were required to take charge of him until he reached New York.

Here he was placed under watch and ward in the west, accumulating considerable money in the short stay there old. Six months ago the Black Hand singled him out for victim. Unwilling to part with the money which he had worked so hard to earn, the Italian refused to pay. Soon, the Italian's enemy was that he would die if he did not pay up and leave the country.

But while the Black Hand did not strike terror in his heart, Scottish worried about the fate of his wife and family something snapped, and from a money-making citizen, Scottish became a maniac.

MAN AND WIFE IN LIVELY FIGHT

Mrs. Charles Riggs has Husband Arrested for Assaulting Her. Claims he Knocked her Down. Defended herself with Paddle.

Charles Riggs charged with having assaulted his wife on Friday evening at their home on York street, was Saturday given a hearing before Squire Hill and in default of $200 bail was held for Court.

Mrs. Riggs appeared against her husband and declared that while she was cooking supper on Friday evening Mr. Riggs came into the kitchen and demanded a package containing some shells and other hunting materials. She answered that she knew nothing about them whereupon he dropped it after calling her a liar.

Several minutes later he returned and again asked for the package and when Mrs. Riggs denied any knowledge of it he attacked her and a lively battle ensued. She testified at the hearing that he hit her on the nose causing it to bleed profusely and her bolt eye bore evidence that it had been struck with considerable force. Mrs. Riggs defended herself with a paddle and her husband had a gash on his head to show where it had been hit with it.

The fight continued for some little time and finally Mr. Riggs succeeded in getting his wife out of the door into the yard when she retaliated, as heard her down. Mr. Riggs then went into the house and at this report, fearing coming to the door and inviting Mrs. Riggs to partake of the evening meal with him, she declined and later in the evening went to Squire Hill's office where she swore out a warrant for her husband's arrest.

Constable Wilson found the man and placed him in jail. He returned to that place after his hearing and unless bail is secured will remain there until January Court.

McWILLIAMS GETS 3 YEARS

Boys who Entered Home of Jacob Strang after Midnight Given Heavy Preliminary Sentence. Jackson and Monroe on Probation

William McWilliams was Monday morning sentenced in Adams County Court to undergo a sentence of three years imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for entering at night the residence of Jacob Strang with the intent of committing a felony.

The man was found in the residence of the Strang several weeks ago and plead guilty. He claimed his home was in Spotsylvania, Virginia and that he could not know how he got into the Strang home. He was represented by Edward A. Warner Esq., who said that the man lived nearby and had gotten into the house through an open door.

The next cases taken up were those against Cyprian Jackson and Norman Monroe who plead guilty to the larceny of coal from the cars of the Western Maryland railroad. The Commonwealth was represented by District Attorney Swope while Charles D. Duncan Esq. spoke in behalf of the Western Maryland Railroad.

Mr. Duncan said that the coal stealing had become a business with some residents of town, both white and colored, every Winter stole coal from the railroad cars as they along the Round Top siding. He said that it was known now that one resident of Gettysburg had his cellar full of stolen coal which he would sell each year in Winter months. Mr. Duncan said that some Baltimore parties came here every Fall and carried on the business during the Winter months, returning to Baltimore in the Spring. Mr. Duncan asked the Court to do something by which would stop the coal stealing permanently, declaring that the railroad company had run up into thousands of dollars.

J. Donald Swope Esq. represented the defendants and, after calling the attention of the Court to their previous good record, showed that Jackson was out of money and was not able to earn any for some time to the time of the trial the illness of his wife he started out with six brothers to Monroe, one morning to pick coal along the tracks. They could not find any and in desperation took a bushel from a car. They were caught and held for Court. Mr. Swope stated that they had not started out with the intention of stealing that it was their first offense, and that the conditions were unusually peculiar.

Judge Sadler said that both men had help the company to apprehend other offenders.

William Stanton was sentenced to undergo a term of three months for having been found guilty of the same offense. The Court said that he imposed sentence on him in order that not on the others, because he had perjured himself and gotten his friends to do likewise.

Judge Sadler then declared that the coal stealing would have to stop and that any others convicted in the future of the offense would be given a Penitentiary sentence unless conditions changed somewhat.

"The two Italians found guilty on Saturday were not sentenced, neither were the others who were convicted, Edward A. Weaver Esq., for a new trial.

IS IT FAIR? IS IT SQUARE?

There may be many, any number of reasons for a trip to the city from a honeymoon to a baseball game. There is not however one good reason why any one who lives, moves and has his being in the Home Town to do any retail shopping in the city.

Retail Shopping is an obligation upon every individual in the Home Town to be done at Home.

Where do you get your living? Where do you sell your labor ? Where do you dispose of the things you have for sale ? The Home Town.

Your clients if you are a lawyer, your patients if you are a doctor, your parishioners if you are a preacher are from the Home Community. If you live or interest the income is earned in the Home Town and the principal was made there. If you are paid a salary it comes from the Home Town. You would not be able going through the town with a fine tooth comb to find any individual independent of the Home Town for all that is worth while. Every single mother's son and daughter of us are dependent upon the rest of us.

Then the Fair and Square Thing is to give the Home Town your retail shopping support to the limit and give it, patriotically as it were, as an obligation you owe that Home Town.

Should not the dollars spent with and to you be spent by you in the community from which they came? Don't they belong to that community.

Live And Let Live At Home.

TROUBLE FOR SAM WEINSTEIN

Gettysburg Junk Dealer Gets Into Trouble in York. Receives Stolen Goods and has his License Revoked.

Samuel Weinstein, formerly of this place and now trading in York as the Gettysburg Junk Company, was fined $100 by Squire Spangler, and his license was revoked, for having withheld from the police information relating to stolen goods received by him. The question was the first under the new ordinance affecting junk dealers and pawnbrokers.

Henry J. Enders, one of the two men arrested by the York detectives, White for stealing pig lead from the York Chemical Works, confessed that he sold 80 pounds of the metal to the company, although Weinstein had denied any knowledge of it. Under the ordinance, blanks are furnished junk dealers which the brokers upon which must be filled all goods of any importance received, and to the names of those who offer the articles. Weinstein had made no record of the transaction.

In the police court Lewis Jacobs, clerk for Weinstein, told of the purchase of the pig lead. The lead had been shipped to Philadelphia, when it was learned that Weinstein had arranged to refund to the dealer the amount paid for it in order to secure its return. Weinstein's license would not have expired until next June. It is thought the person will be let out the license.

The clerk, Jacobus, was discharged.

INTERESTING FIND

From Fulton county there comes the remarkable story of an iron ring, resembling an ordinary finger ring, found on the inside of a piece of limestone. Some men on the farm upon which the limestone is found were breaking a lime kiln and in breaking the rock the iron ring was found near the center

How it got there is attributed to the formation of the limestone rock, ages and years ago. presumably before American was discovered. This supposition is the evidences of mining in Fulton county, leads one to the conclusion that the American Indian was preceded by a race of people versed in iron and other metal working. A piece of limestone holding of pick axes in the old copper mines of Fulton county abandoned, possibly, a thousand years ago.

The metal of which the axes were made is rust proof, and has also taken today as though tipped with highly polished brass. The handles were of wood that had been previously treated by being put all way and then subjected to a retort from which the air had been exhausted, so that the wood under the pickax handles are as perfect today as the day they were fitted into the picks. The handles are held in place with a sharp knife, but they are fire proof and will not split.

Wood mulling furnaces have also been found made of the materials that never perish and which are today in use been able to figure out their uses.

Fulton county, Pennsylvania, is the one and minerals that would have delighted the heart of Agassiz, to motel art work and no doubt a thousand years ago that county was a land of great activity.

Some odd carving also found will be sent to the Smithsonian Institute and an effort will be made to interest scientists in the matter of its origin. The ring is of more than mother earth is now revealing to modern man.

TEAM GONE FOR THREE WEEKS

John Shultz Borrows Team from Franklin County Man and Brings it into Adams County. Followed by Owner of Team.

Taking a team for three weeks and coming into Adams County in search of a horse almost got John Shultz, of Franklin Dale, into a deep lot weeks when the owner of the team started forth on Friday to hunt Mr. Shultz and his property.

Shultz, so the story goes, had applied to Jacob Frick, of Waynesboro several weeks ago for work. He claimed that he was in need of a team of a place to own a living and Mr. Frick consented to a use, gave him a job. A few days later Shultz told Frick that he would like to move to Waynesboro to be nearer his work. Frick's team consisting of a mule and spring wagon, he got his family and goods which he claimed were near the Franklin county town.

That was the last Mr. Frick saw of Shultz or the team until Friday when he became too anxious and started to remain idle any longer and started for Adams County. He came into the county and near Fountain Dale found Shultz, his wife and goods all in the wagon, driving towards Waynesboro. When asked for an explanation of his leaving the county and not long borrowing of the team Shultz said he was leaving for the reason, as the Western end of Adams County and not Franklin suited him and decided to return to Waynesboro

The owner of the team and his employee kept on and returned to Way nesboro on Friday afternoon.

QUITE A DIFFERENCE

With the mild summer weather that this section has had for some few days, is probable that but few people have noticed that Spring came ago the deepest snow of last winter fell.

On November 14, 1908 snow began falling about eight o'clock in the morning and continued until 9 o'clock in the evening. It lay right inches deep on the ground. The thermometer registered 32 degrees and between 8 and 6 o'clock, when the snow fell very rapidly.

With the snow there came a drop in temperature and the night was very cold, the thermometer but a few degrees above zero.

LOST TO INDIANS

The Gettysburg College foot ball team lost a hard fought game at Carlisle on Saturday to the Indian School team on the grounds of that school by a score of 10 to 0. The game was hard fought throughout but Gettysburg could not score touchdown. A large number of substitutes were used by both teams but the game was the orange and blue held the red skins for downs several times within the five yard line.

PEAS BLOOMING

Captain James T. Long has a large number of garden pea vines which are in bloom. It is a most unusual sight. The vines are growing in as flourishing a manner as is usually seen in May.

A START IN ALFALFA.

While alfalfa is not generally successful it is in sony sections of the south and west, many located in the northern and eastern sections and with accurate conditions are not so favorable that the crop cannot be made quite satisfactory if less uniform success in yields. In Adams county, where interest in the matter of getting a start in it has been worked out, and a inspection of the chief of these may be of help to those who have never had any experience with the legume. Land on which it is to be sown should be high and dry, with most any subsoil but waterlogged and undrained land will never the purpose. The best time for sowing is from the last of the to the 15th of August, a piece of land that would be ready for corn can be improved being preferable, as the weeds are easily kept down in check. Seed should be given a top dressing of eight to ten tons of lime and if convenient a dressing of well rotted manure. The seed should be sown at the rate of about twenty pounds to the acre and preferably with a disk drill, which will insure all the seed being covered and placed in moist soil if cultivation is given, an important consideration if the weather should be very dry at seeding time. The seed should not be cut next fall, as all the growth will be needed to give a mulch for the snow.

AN ODD COURTSHIP.

By M. GUAL.
(Copyright, 1911, by American Literary Press.)

The wife of Deacon Hiram Platt had been dead three years when it came to his ears that people were wondering why he didn't place a tombstone at her grave. It was not that the worthy husband had fully intended to give her a monument thirty feet high; three months after he had received the delight to drown feels; then he had gone down from the world he figured that a common gravestone would be all that was required. One may have his own ideas about such matters, but when people begin to talk he must consult the ideas of others to a certain extent. Deacon Hiram Platt bustled around to put up a stone.

About the decent time he met his wife Mrs. Samantha Taylor, living in the same village, but her husband. She also had a thirty foot monument to her mind, and she also wanted it down to a plain, cheap stone. Further, there were a few other points criticised her for the somewhat grave and sin act, and these something she had removed to another village, hence Deacon Hiram was a widower. He thus came about one summer day, when the deacon was out, to the county graveyard to fix up things, he found the widow there for the same object. The grave of their dead were not fifty feet apart. The deacon had a look of sorrow on his face and the widow had a look of woe on hers as she looked down.

"She was a noble man," said the deacon, referring, of course, to the lamented Dr. Taylor.

"And she was all that a wife should be," replied the widow, referring, of course, to the lamented Mrs. Platt.

"I am glad to know that you esteem him."

"And I am glad to know that you esteem her."

"Her time had come, and she had to go."

"And the same with him."

The widow had to be cleared away and the mounds rounded up and packed well and the grave set to rights. They worked together at this. They sorrowed for a time had to be said, and then it was something else. When their backs ached and they were ready to quit work for the day the deacon helped her into her buggy and said kindly:

"I have seemed to feel Mrs. Platt looking down on me this afternoon."

"And I have felt the presence of my poor lost husband hovering near."

Then they both looked very solemn, and the deacon got to nature on the horse and fed the deacon there before her. It was not realized that he seemed was a noble man, and she repeated that her husband was all that a wife should be. They sat down and lapped a cup of tea and bitten and brought dirt and sadness, and when they rested they drew together as on one old bench. It was during one of these resting spells that the deacon sighed three times in succession and said:

"Widow Platt, this is a lonely old home and you were sitting alone in your homestead all day your thinks it possible that you could find another man on good average year?"

"Why, while he was a noble sant, there could be added none to fill the world," she replied.

"Yes, widow, and other noble women, though I never had so fast to and with Dr. Taylor, I am sure we loved him."

"Yes, we did."

"And it grieved as to see them go."

"It did."

"But they are better off in that brighter land."

Then they parted and went home, and it was noticed that neither looked as solemn as before. They were not smiling, but their features looked less sombre changed themselves away. The next day he was the end of all of their work, and they both got there early. The deacon seemed to prove the widow's bread when he helped his cut of the loaf, and she seemed to fill confused over it, but this may be we have all known. By mid-day they spent the stones were in place, and as they returned to a few more in search then the deacon solemnly said:

"Widow, I feel that my husband can look down on earth he is seeing that we and saying to himself that I'll find second match for anybody."

"Yes, I feel that way, said your Hiram, or most say the same thing. We could have got somewhere, of course," she replied.

Then circumstances attract lightning, started the dreams.

"And are there any more in high strike," said the deacon as them in recent on. Yes, I think on the last room could to feel quite chirpy," but here the best has been."

"And they are picturesquely situated, deacon."

Then the deacon led her out to the gate and her buggy. They walked up a slow pace, and he noticed at notice that he was holding her hand. When was the way second to the widow to the deacon rested a foot on the last of a step and said right hand said:

"Purty lonesome for as, widow."

"Yes, purty lonesome, deacon."

"I think I'll drive over to see you tomorrow afternoon."

"I'll be expecting you."

"And we'll talk."

"Yes."

"And we'll talk—and talk."

"We will."

And three months later, when they were married, the gossips were most struck it. They said that the couple had done a very shameful thing. It was not, he knew better. It was done just as inside the gate.

FARMHOUSE SANITATION.

The problem of house sanitation is largely solved by city residents who have running water and sewer connection into good sewage systems. In smaller towns and in the country, where such an outlet is not possible, the matter of the home drainage and refuse should receive careful attention. Where the householder has the means by all odds the best system is an indoor toilet room, coupled with good drainage in the east, bath and lavatory into a cesspool in the rear located at a sufficient distance from the well so that there can be no danger of pollution or contamination of the water supply therefrom. Next to such a system is installed pipes from the kitchen sink and bath room, through which the wastes are limited or the house is cold and which water conditions are such that the pipes are likely to freeze, they should be removed before February 1st is the thirties and has a wife and two small children.

ALWAYS A MODEL EMPLOYE

R. P. Long, general agent for the Pittsburg, Shawmut & Northern, couldn't talk about the matter. "We're sorry for the young man. He's always been a model employe," Mr. Long said, "We're deeply sorry on account of his family. The money has been returned to us—every penny."

The whole story was told by Bowers's cold confession to Constable Smith.

Monday morning he stopped in at the Rockford National bank and asked if there was anything for the Pittsburg, Shawmut & Northern. Bowers said he did not know requested the question to another clerk and received a negative reply. Then Bowers was told it was intended for a Mr. Morgan. Bowers said he knew the package and from the way it was addressed he knew it contained money. Many and many a time he had handled the package with the result placed the package with the result back to him. Bowers signed the first name that came to his mind, "Thomas Morgan."

Then he had left the bank he opened it and looked over the neat pile of $100 bills nicely wrapped together with yellow paper bands. He set the thing and pocketed off a bill.

CONFESSED AT STARTS INQUIRY

Shortly after the disappearance of the money started a hubbub in the bank. Bowers was questioned by the search began for the man who signed the name "Thomas Morgan." All sorts theories were run down by the "corporation" Bowers was questioned, then the telephone wires had become crossed with the police calling the office of the company office to notify it of a package waiting at the bank to be sent to Pittsburg. Then the police on the wires had gone around and got the whole matter straightened out. The express office clerical force hunted and hunted, but the package was gone, and that night he was frightened. The hunt for the money was getting an uncomfortable one.

Thursday evening he wrapped the $10,000 in a newspaper and went to the ground to the home of a friend. The friend was not home, but the wife was at the usual. The slip-up named an owes to Bowers.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT

"Well, tell your husband when he comes in that I dropped around to say that I've a gift here for my wife—a Christmas gift. I want to surprise her, and I'll call on her until the holidays." The woman laid the package on the sideboard and went all about it when her husband returned.

"Mr. Bowers been here and left a package for you to keep for him," she said. "He's going to surprise Mrs. Then he jumped so that his with thought something but bitten him. "Why, no," she answered with bulging eyes. "Bowers gave me this!"

Friday morning he returned the package which he placed in the Constable Smith's hands. Bowers' father went to Harrisburg when he heard the news of his son's trouble, and the confession to have come to the other fix. Late in the evening the mystery about "Morgan" was cleared up by the officer and by Bowers at work. Bowers broke down and made his confession.

The money was opened for him last evening and he had a look in at the meager furnishings Bowers turned ruefully to Constable Smith.

"What a fool I was to do it," said he, "just to think of it less than a week ago I was worth ten thousand dollars!"

BIGLERVILLE BOY STEALS $10,000

Harry B. Bowers, Agent for Express Company in Harrisburg, Takes Big Sum. All but $130 Returned. Father Makes this Good.

Harry D. Bowers son of Samuel N. Bowers, of Biglerville, an employe of the United States Express company in Harrisburg, confessed on Friday to having stolen a large package containing $10,000 in currency that had been consigned by the Harrisburg National bank to the Gettysburg bank. He is reported on duty after the theft until the package was missed.

Bowers was arrested about 8 o'clock by Detective Constable Charles H. Smith. The return of the money was made possible largely through the officer's efforts.

Bowers made a complete confession to the officer and when asked why he committed the theft, said, "Well, I was just tempted and I fell—that's all."

The prisoner's bail was fixed at $5,000 by Alderman Hoverter, before whom he was taken, charged with larceny. It is reported that his father will qualify before Judge Kunkel today and receive his sentence.

Bowers has been employed two years of service with the United States Express company. On February 1st he is the thirties and has a wife and two small children.

A. R. Encampment Army National Encampment at Gettysburg next Summer, providing for side trips to Gettysburg. In this the way it is believed that Gettysburg will receive a large amount of patronage during the encampment week.

Another improvement taken up at Friday evening's meeting was the introduction of a bill in the State Legislature Committee to write the president of the Gettysburg Trolley lines shortened to enter Gettysburg, pointing out to those officials the increase amount of business which will be done in 1912 at the time of the Grand Encampment of the Blue and asking that they hurry work along so that the Gettysburg line may be taking up the matter of providing a Gettysburg line may be taking up the matter of providing a Gettysburg line may be taking up the matter of providing a

MASSACHUSETTS GOVERNOR HERE

Distinguished Party of New Englanders Spending Several Days in Town and on Battlefield. Gledstoned Monument.

Governor Eben S. Draper, of Massachusetts together with a large number of prominent Massachusetts state officials and their wives, constitute a party of distinguished visitors who are spending several days here. They arrived Friday morning in their private train over the Western Maryland from the South, having been away on a two weeks' trip through Southern states.

The principal object of the trip was the dedication of Massachusetts' monument at Rotten Rouge, Louisiana, to the officers and men of that state in the Department of the Gulf who fell while fighting during the Civil War. The party left Boston on Tuesday of last week and on their trip have visited the following places: Washington, Mobile, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Vicksburg, Chattanooga and Lenoy.

They will return by way of Philadelphia. The party is in charge of H. Y. Darnell, tourist agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The distinguished party are loud in their appreciation of the cordial and hospitable reception which they received at the hands of the people of the Southern states. Everywhere they went there were assemblies on all sides of the friendly spirit manifested by the Southerners and it has been one of the most pleasant features of the entire trip.

At among the prominent members of the party are Governor Eben S. Draper, General Charles H. Taylor, Charles P. Sim, General W. H. Bigham, Hon. S. Cola, Hon. W. S. Gliddon, Hon. A. T. Treadway, Hon. Joseph Walker, Col. Frederick Major Jr. Sons, Major T. Aldrich Lieutenant F. Hinckley, Sergeant J. H. Hemenell, Col. R. P. Sherwood, Captain D. T. Remington, Hon. B. E. Denny, Hon. William Trenk, Hon. J. H. Hibbard, Hon. L. Burnham, General J. R. Whitney.

The tourists are registered at the Eagle Hotel and will remain here until Saturday afternoon. They were taken over the field by Captain Long in Holtzworth Brothers' teams.

VIRGINIA DENIED REQUESTED SITE

Southern State Asks Permission to Place Memorial at Moody Angle. Its Room there and New Choice will have to be Made.

Governor Swanson, of Virginia, and Colonel Thomas Smith, two members of the Virginia Monument Commission, met at Washington this week with Colonel Isaac N. Lindower, and General L. L. Lomax, of the Gettysburg National Park Commission and Secretary of War Dickinson to request that a site be granted at the Bloody Angle for the Virginia memorial to her troops who fought in this battle.

The request was denied on the ground that there was no available site at the angle and that all monuments be placed along the lines of battle. It was also agreed that no monuments be placed along the Confederate line of battle, and that the Confederate monuments be placed along the Union lines. It is expected that the request will soon on order making this a binding precedent.

When the Virginia Commission visited Gettysburg some months ago it was suggested that a site for the memorial would be placed on West Confederate avenue between the monuments of Pickett's Charge and many believe that that place will ultimately be chosen.

The monument, according to present plans, will have a heroic figure of Virginia surmounted by an equestrian statute of General Robert E. Lee and will be erected not only to the leader of the Confederate troops here but also to the Virginia regiments which took part in this battle.

PLANS ON FOOT FOR HOSPITAL

Gettysburg People and City Physicians Working on Plans to Give this Town a Hospital. Need has Long been Felt.

Working quietly for the past few months several Gettysburg women and a number of people, physicians and businessmen, from other places, now have on a fair way plans for the raising of funds for the erection and maintenance of a hospital in this place.

A prominent Philadelphia architect has volunteered his services in the preparation of plans for hospital and has already submitted one set of drawings. Many city physicians are interested and have volunteered financial assistance. It is believed that the donation of a site for the building can be secured.

Among those from a distance interested are parties close to political leaders and their approbation is also said to be a probable aid.

Though the work has been done quietly for the past few months it is generally and is the hands of those having the best interests of Gettysburg and its people at heart, it is confidently hoped that by the end of the month will be a reality within a reasonably short time. The need of a hospital here long been felt here. Scarcely a week passes but what some one from the county is not taken to a city hospital for treatment, all of whom could receive proper treatment in a home institution. In addition to those there are many cases that it is believed, would go to a hospital but would not have been, for the reason that local physicians have expressed themselves as not willing to operate in some cases on account of the danger of infection following operations in places which were not adapted for that kind of work and it is believed firmly by those interested in the movement that many could be saved and many others prolong their lives if a hospital were established in Gettysburg.

NEW TROLLEY ROAD

A corps of engineers, believed to be in the employ of the state, was at Mont Alto Monday. They went over the mountain by the narrow gauge through Bromms Hollow to the pipe line and then down to White Rock Sanatorium. The presumption is that they are surveying for the trolley road which Health Commissioner Dixon is anxious to have the state construct from Mont Alto to the sanatorium. There are possibly a dozen cab lines operated between Mont Alto station and the sanatorium, besides numerous private conveyances and the state's auto. The fare charged on these cab lines is $1.50.

Dr. Dixon is of the opinion that the state can operate a trolley line cheaper than it can keep horse or transport patients by cabs.

The coming of the engineers was soon after the governor's visit to make a re-survey, is interpreted as a sign that the governor is in sympathy with Dr. Dixon's plans.

Wiring Summer Homes

Rice Ridge Summit is to have electric lights. The system is being installed. Homes and business places already connected with the wires and poles are being put up and wires strung from the electric light power plant at Maryland Refrigerator Sanatorium, Sabillasville.

It is the intention of the owners of nearly all the hotels, boarding houses and cottages to install electric lights which will make a decided improvement in that section of the famous Blue Mountain resort.

Jacob Conaut, station agent at Waynesboro for the railroad company, Rice Ridge Summit, is having a handsome brick summer cottage built in the vicinity of "The Knoxl." The house will be supplied with all the modern improvements, including bat, light and bath.

SHOT DUCK

LOWER END HAS BURGLARY SCARE

Toll's Station Alarmed by Attempt at Early Morning Burglars to Get Booty. Frustrated in their Efforts.

From the lower end of the county comes news of an unsuccessful attempt to burglarize the store of Cloud & Kline, at Toll's Station.

The burglars broke into the block south shop of Charles Carbaugh, near Toll's Station, and used a hatchet with which they intended to use in gaining an entrance to the store. While attempting to pry open a door the chores were heard by H. W. Kline, who sleeps above the store.

Mr. Kline jumped up and procured a Winchester rifle which he keeps in his room, and started down stairs. The thieves evidently heard the footsteps and fled. Mr. Kline fired several shots after the fleeing thieves, but failed to hear any groans as he has not been learned. A large trap in the hallway and floor was found between the door and frame, which was used in the attempt to pry open the door, a portion of which had been chipped off in order to force in the door.

Even had Mr. Kline not been awak by the noise in the store above the door, he would have been aroused later on the opening of the door as all the burglars had to do was enter with burglar alarms.

There is no clue to the thieves.

FARMERS WORRY OVER DROUGHT

Must Haul Water or Drive Stock to it. Many Wells Going Dry for First Time, Wheat Damaged by Dry Weather.

Farmers all over Adams County are greatly worried over the efforts of the long continued drought which the claim is doing serious damage to all attitude to among them great annoyance and inconvenience.

Wells are now becoming dry which have been known to fail and farmers are up against the proposition of driving their stock to water or else haul water for their farms from nearby streams. The former plan is impracticable in many instances, for if they have to go any distance the stock is a misery when they return as before they were started out. Few farmers in the county are equipped to haul water and the matter is quite serious.

The 1907 wheat crop will be seriously damaged if rains, and heavy rains, do not come in a few days. The early wheat is already getting yellow in some places and the late wheat will not get a fair start before Winter sets in" unless the rain comes.

The continued effects of a long continued drought are being felt everywhere and farmers are hoping strongly for a heavy fall of rain.

Adams County News

VOLUME [illegible] GETTYSBURG, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 27 1915 NUMBER [illegible]

GEO. WOLF SHOT BY UNKNOWN MAN

Well Known Resident of the County Shot in Mysterious Manner near Bettysburg Friday Afternoon. In Serious Condition.

Mystery surrounds the shooting of George Wolf which took place near the Hilltop cabin a short distance South of town about half past four o'clock on Friday afternoon.

The man who resides at the intersection of West Confederate avenue and the Emmitsburg road was shot in the back while allowing his horse to drink from the stream which flows from the Lightner ice house pond into Rock Creek. He heard no sound of a gun and saw no one for some time before the incident occurred. Mr. Wolf narrowly escaped instant death, the bullet penetrating the back within a quarter of an inch of the vascal cord.

Mr. Wolf was in the employ of the Gettysburg National Park Commission, hauling stone from the Government quarry at Devers' Hill to the mennan in the vicinity of Spangler's Spring. He was driving across the small stream above referred to when he noticed that his horse wanted to drink. He stopped the animal to quench its thirst and while it was drinking he stood up in the cart.

Suddenly he felt a stinging pain in his back and was in the fear of the cart with a cry of agony. The pain was more than he could endure and, not knowing what had happened, he called for help. The call was heard by H. E. Lightner, who resides near the Baltimore Pike not far away, but he at first took it to come from two fellows rolling each other. Finally he realized that some one was in trouble and he started in the direction of the call. He soon saw Mr. Wolf who called to him for help.

When Mr. Lightner reached Mr Wolf's side he better examined "Some one struck me in the back. So how badly I am hurt."

Upon examination Mr. Lightner was astonished to find a hole in the unfortunate man's overalls's made by a bullet. Mr. Wolf was surprised, too, when his friend told him that had happened so he thought the noise was but his wife in the store. Mr. Lightner at once brought him to town to the office of Dr. Hess, man who sooth an examination. Dr. Stewart also being present.

The bullet was found on the right side of the body below the chestnut but either gone right through or else he followed a rib. It was located about one and two inches below the skin and was removed without difficulty. The bullet was a rifle.

An investigation has been made by some friends of George Wolf, who was mysteriously shot near town last Friday afternoon, and some very strong evidence has been secured pointing to the party who fired the shot.

The following morning as inspection was made at the place at which the unfortunate man was allowing his horse to drink when he was shot. The position which he occupied and the course of the shot. It was also made it impossible for the shot to have been fired from more than one direction, and from that direction the person who fired the shot must have been Mr. Wolf.

Everything now points to the illicit hood that the man who shot Mr. Wolf knew at the time that he did it. It is possible that he may have shot at some other object and the bullet glanced side of its intended mark but that the latter contention is one that will not know at once that he had shot the man in the course is most improbable.

The person who is suspected is known to have been hunting with a rifle in that section on the afternoon of the affair Whether or not he will be arrested if sufficient evidence is secured to hold him, has not been definitely stated by the parties investigating the case. This will probably be determined by subsequent developments in Mr. Wolf's condition.

He is now suffering terribly from nervous shock but his recovery is looked for unless something unforseen should follow. He is at present of age.

Good Concert

A small audience was present at the first band concert of the Winter held in the Conl House Tuesday evening. The concert was all that could have been desired and it was a "good pity that there was not a larger audience present to enjoy it.

NEWS FROM BER'S CAMP

Orrtanna, Nov. 9 Joseph P. McKee, Esq., of Hanover, and Joseph or Samuel, of Churchill, Pa. sons of Charles McKee(ex deceased, have come back to their camp recently in Buchanan Valley to engage in the deer hunt In Monday they went trying to secure a large buck on the ground. They had hunted some when young men, and they had the pleasure of the company of those who had hunted with them in those days. Their brother, George, of Altoona, is also with them in the Kaiser Camp, but he has been here later and has been a member for several years.

John Mickley, of Cashtown, a prominent deer hunter of this county, shot a large buck, at Culler's Run, succeeding him severely, but he got away. He was followed by dogs but did not find him.

He and Samuel Arnold, John F. Cole's residence, and followed the run for a while, and through the old dam, crossing the Big Run field. Your correspondent being attracted by a shot from a rifle saw the animal slowly down over the field, a giant buck in size. He turned and went toward the timber. The hunters have not yet secured the wounded deer.

HORSE RAN AWAY WITH CRIPPLE

McSherrystown Has Thrilling Run away in which Cripple is Thrown from Vehicle Sustaining Dislocated Shoulder.

McSherrystown had an exciting runaway Monday afternoon in which J. Wesley Hartzell, of Littlestown, and C. E. Smith, of Lancaster, were the participants. Mr. Smith had his left shoulder dislocated and received several bruises on his body. Mount, automobile of Mr. Smith, was driving on the road, near McSherrystown, between 4 and 5 p. m., when a horse hitched in front of the home of Edward Day coming to the road and ran away, striking against a telephone pole. Mr. Hostetter jumped from the buggy to catch the horse's head, but missed his sight and Mr. Smith (who is a cripple) sustained injuries.

The maddened animal, after running fully half a mile, upset the buggy and wrecked it, throwing Mr. Smith to the ground, with the above result. Dr. Frank Stock, of McSherrystown, and Dr. Foist farm, picked up the injured man and summoned him to the office of Dr. A. C. Rice, who with the assistance of Dr. George L. Hice reduced the dislocation. Mr. Smith, who took the injured man to Rm the Gettysburg hospital on Monday night and Tuesday morning returned to his home in Lancaster.

WOODCHUCK BAD ANIMAL

Reports of young apple and peach trees being damaged through the bark having been eaten by rodents existed are being received at the division of zoology of the department of agriculture. The damage is said to be largely occasioned by rabbits, in regard to which the department issued a bulletin. The division several weeks ago. The bad effects of girdling, especially in the case, state zoologist, is of the opinion that the woodchuck, or ground hog, for which some of the blame should often responsible for such damage in the orchard. The fact that the rabbits to eat the bark of trees so early in the season.

Bailer delivered the anniversary sermon.

STATE POLICE FIGHT FIRE

Sent to South Mountain to Stop Fires Caused by Hunters and to Protect Deer from Violators of Game Laws.

A detail of a sergeant and three troopers from Troop C, State Police, arrived at Mont Alto Tuesday. They were sent to Mont Alto by Captain John C. Greene, superintendent, of Philadelphia, at the request of Commissioner of Health Dixon, and Forester Cann Protector Kalbfus.

It is said that hunters are violating the game laws not that some of the forest fires which have been raging in the Cumberland Valley are due to the carelessness of hunters.

There have been three fires in the vicinity of White Pine Camp within the past few days, which they had not discovered in time, might have done considerable damage to the buildings and timber.

There are now about 100 patients at the sanatorium and the camp is in reality a small city. At some places the line within which hunters may use bullets to approach is less than a quarter of a mile from the buildings and the danger to life is very great.

Some of the hunters in the South Mountain section are using high power ammunition in their rifles and to this is attributed the forest fires.

The high power ammunition is of the heavier calibre and denser powder charge than that used by the hunters for greater velocity and longer carry, thus increasing the danger.

The rifles with the heavier charges are used mostly for deer hunting. In fact it is possible to hear a shot a distance of from one to one and a half miles. It is also said to be unsafe to forests or buildings at this distance as the force of the bullet is not affecting the property of the area of that the troopers are sent to Mont Alto.

BOY KILLED AT EMMITSBURG

Harry F. Hardagan Falls from Heavy Wagon in Front of Wheels and Receives Internal Injuries from which he Dies Soon Afterward.

Thursday morning about 11.45 the ten-year-old son of Mr. Helen Hardagan, Harry Francis Hardagan, of Emmitsburg was the victim of a fatal accident. The boy, it is said, attempted to get on the "hay board" of a heavy wagon driven by Edward Shuff. C. Eyler and in his efforts slipped under the wheels of the wagon, the front that he died fifteen minutes later.

The boy had previously accompanied the driver to the farm of Mr. Eyler which he was hauling for Rev. Dr. Bonebrake, of Frederick, and on account but evidently became tired riding on the load and thought that he would be easier on the "hay board." He was within changing his position that the accident happened.

His body was immediately carried to the home of Mr. Lawyer and Dr. Stone was summoned but nothing could be done to save his life. His death was due to an internal rupture, probably of the liver. There were no other injuries.

His widowed mother who is employed at St. Joseph's College, near Emmitsburg was notified of the accident. The boy was born on April 6th the 10th of September last. He is survived by his mother, one brother and four sisters.

BIG PAINT SHIPMENT

Says the Gettysburg Patriot—Employees of the Hanover Shoe Factory have been shipped out of the Cumberland Valley Railway from the Hanover Junction. The cars are made from the points on the Gettysburg and Harrisburg branch, and the cousins making the shipments are Cumberland, Adams and Franklin. Some portion, however, was made some south in ports of Maryland and West Virginia.

"It has been said that in a few years the shoe industry will be one of the greatest fruit producing districts in the country. The orchards are coming on very heavy, there being as high as 800 cars of fruit shipped from some of the points along the Gettysburg and Harrisburg branch."

JERE CARL

Jere Carl, one of York's most prominent residents, died early Thursday from Bright's disease after an illness of years. He was an active business man and prominent in the affairs of politics. For 25 years he was president of the York Water Company and was head of the York and Gettysburg turnpike company; connected with several other turnpike companies; was president of the York County Historical Society and prominently identified with home insurance companies. He was also actively engaged in church work and was a member of the Board of Trustees of Gettysburg College.

Misses Bessie and Mary Linn, of route 8, spent Sunday in Maryland.

Zacharias Linn, of route 8, visited William and Russell Murray on Sunday.

EDUCATION FOR THE BOYS.

Why Sons of Small Farmers Develop Mental Ability.

The education acquired on the small farm is modern citizenship because it is a many sided education and gives correct impressions of many phases of life. All over the world the small, independent farmers are sacred supporters of conservative government. They are known lovers of home and opposed to radical changes.

Ultimately the small farmer learns to keep a reserve of cash against emergencies, and has acquired premises relations become very important factors in the capital of the nation. He can give more reliable then deposits from commercial men. The vast sums of money necessary to carry on the business of a nation are not derived from the deposits of capitalists, but from the earnings of millions of thrifty small depositors. This is especially true in England, France, Germany and the United States.

It has been observed for years that the sons of small farmers develop mentally sharper than those of city workingmen; they are compelled to do things and to use their brains more. It is from this source that the greatest number of statesmen of the various governments of our country have been drawn.

The great value of selecting and training youth for agriculture is so universally conceded that it does not require discussion. The necessity of preserving and developing the standard of husbandry upon adult farmers through short courses under state supervision is rapidly being accepted by the American people as a most important factor of self defense for the safety of masses and necessary to any general and rapid advancement.

If all in considered education that would tend to the development of the individual, then the amount of education acquired in the best schools is only a fraction of what the average man must have to succeed in life. It is, then, of the highest importance to the state that the greatest mass of knowledge should be correct, broad, conservative and elevating. Liberal provision has been made for schools by the state, by churches and by individual gifts, but the molding of the whole character of the best interests of society has been mainly left to the capricious individual effort. The state can with propriety specially favor such conditions of society, such lines of industry or such occupations as evidently have moral and physical vigor, to breadth of understanding, to the best citizenship and to the stability of the state. For these ends no more potent influence has been found than an intelligent, prosperous and contented body of thrifty small farmers.

Pickling and Pasting Apples.

The harvest of the apple is here and will continue for some weeks. Here are some suggestions that may assist the growers:

Pick into baskets. They should be about half bushel and round, with firm handles. The baskets should be smooth on the inside—that is, free from splits around the bottom and top, lined with burlap to prevent bruising, and a short iron hook should be attached to the handle to suspend the basket from the limb, so as to enable the picker to use both hands.

The great advantage in using the basket lies largely in the fact that if the apples are carefully placed in the basket they will not be bruised.

Apples parted from the table and immediately placed in cold storage will they are to be put into cold storage; will give by far the better results. This method adds two to four months to the keeping qualities of the fruit. You cannot afford to let your fruit lie under the trees in a building for two or three weeks before you barrel. Fruit grown in a warm latitude or even harvested during a warm September or October must be promptly handled. But when properly handled at picking time there will not be near enough for our plants. A good barrel is essential if you make your own, for you have to keep well and sell. A tight barrel is the best, and the better it is made the better results you will have. There will be less loss from shrinkage of fruit, from rots and mice and other causes.

In handling barreled apples to the car and in shipping by the barrels on the side. Never stand them on end if you want the fruit to remain in good condition.

Keep Celery Growing.

Celery should be kept growing rapidly and without interruption. A check in growth will often make the plant go to seed instead of producing edible stalks.

A FIGHTING EDITOR.

By MARTIN V. ANDREWS.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

Abner Church after serving on appropriation bill as acting a patent election writer to the farmers of New Hog land was selected to serve as one of a number of agencies abroad for the sale of the same article. Power was the territory assigned him, with Paris for his headquarters.

He had no sooner opened his active campaign than he received a letter from the representative of a Paris morning paper offering to buy his stuff at 10 cents per line for it. Abner said that that he was not yet ready. The solicitor replied that he was a fighting editor and said that if the paper didn't get the ad it would be the loser by a considerable in enterprise. Abner replied that he came of a long line of fighting ancestors in advertising and the newspapers' solicitor could have the ad on those terms. In other words, where newspaper blackmail was unknown. The journal was welcome to "live away."

The next morning its article appeared in the home columns of the paper in question, stating that the election writers here the articles wrung in the Kansas and the Bowie and by Abner Church simply reduced them to ribbons. Then it was boiled down still more intervals and were copied by other papers, including a big up his sleeve he must stop the slender on his nose and his pocket book and go to Europe. He called at the office of the journal that had sent him the article to be tested. He was listened to politely by the editor of the paper interviewed and when he had finished was referred to the business manager, to whom he said he was assured would take up the matter.

Abner found H. Chiselet sitting in a big armchair with his feet on the desk, eating a novel and smoking a cigarette. He was a man with a florid face, a bald head and wore the ribbon of the Legion of Honor in his buttonhole.

Abner stated his case, to which the gentleman listened attentively and at last said:

"You I understand, monsieur, that you are here to raise the matter over. While there is genteelly dressed French men who can't read and no one can impose on safe between M. Church and M. Chiselet.

"I have no quarrel with M. Chiselet," said Abner. "Who the dickens is M. Chiselet anyway?"

"Monsieur Chiselet, being an American, does not understand. M. Chiselet is the fighting editor of the paper."

"Writes up duels, you mean."

"Monsieur Chiselet does not write nothing. It is his duty to give satisfaction to those who feel that they have been insulted by the journal and to defend its honor. I understand you have accused it of blackmailing you. You have given the challenge."

"You tell the fighting editor that my ancestors fought with an arm on the action side at Gettysburg, and we Churches would not back down from a duel. Tell him I'll fight him with rifles at 200 yards."

The visitor protested that such weapons were not used in duels, to which Abner replied that in America no one fought with anything primitive and he would fight with the weapon he could handle at short range.

When the fighting editor received the news that he was to stand up against an American rifle it occurred to him that for once in his life he might be would earn his salary. He was a perfect swordsman and a dead shot with a pistol at short range, but had never fought with rifles. Abner, who had all the so called bravery of the Texans as well as the fighting proclivities of the Georgian, had once blue word that he'd better make a will, since he proposed to aim straight at his heart and he had never owned a weapon in his life save with a rifle.

Just after daylight one morning the fighting editor drove up to a secluded spot in the Bois de Boulogne, alighted with his attendants and waited for his opponent. Abner, who had not slept since he arrived, on the roof was astonishing Paris by the coolness with which he assured of which could not in the dim light distinguish the sights of his rifle on the corner of his store removed to accompany his principal to the scene of the field. M. Chiselet went up to it for a look and saw a rifle, on the butt of which was a silver plate bearing the inscription "Abner Church, Gettysburg, Pa."

M. Chiselet shuddered. This gentleman Americano way of fighting threatens all the journals. Abner stood over the coffin, leaning on a long rifle and when the men at the rear he intended to occupy it with a strange, disdainful stare. One of the attendants noted that the fighting editor was losing his nerve and asked if there was not some arrangement. Abner replied that the arrangement must be him alone, a reference was had between the seconds, and it was agreed that Abner should withdraw his charge of blackmailing and the paper would publish an item in its home department especially commending the Bowie wringing machine.

Then the party drove to a cafe, where they breakfasted together, while the coffin was carried via the entrance into the undertaker's shop from which it had been borrowed.

Thankful Thanksgiving

Every individual has it in his or her power to make Thanksgiving Day more truthful to its name.

If throughout the year every one would spend his dollars at home and put the unspent in the home banks, the circulating medium would not only be kept in the largest per capita condition but the volume of the money would be constantly increasing. The more money in a community the more money with which to buy at home the things you need or want. The more money the better the chance to sell your products, or your labor or that in which you deal and the increased circulation can not help but make the people thankful for the fruits of a year of plenty.

No better prescription could be concocted for a lean year than by going out of your town and your community to trade, doing as much shopping away from home, circulating your money where it will do the circulator and his neighbors no good whatever. This will make money scarcer and harder to get and will diminish your own chance as well as that of your neighbor. There you have one way of getting a lean year.

Years of plenty come from being wise, taking care of the home town and community so that they in turn take care of you and the result of this golden rule of business would bring every year a really and truly

THE FLY PEST.

Incessant warfare can be waged against the common house fly without any compunction of conscience on the part of even the most delicate humanity. There is not a good and redeeming word that can be said in the fly's favor. It makes a bad start by hatching in the horse manure pile, and its career is a filthy one from this on. It frequents every barnyard, manure pile and stable and decaying vegetable and animal matter and then comes into the house seeking and gurus laden. It seeks refuge in the house, infesting pails and paper, dish and glass and contaminating any food that it may alight upon. It is recognized by health authorities everywhere as a disseminator of typhoid and other filth disease germs. One of the best ways to get rid of large numbers of the pest is to keep the nursery pile cleaned up and spread out daily, and if this is not practicable to some recent use of accomplished by scattering small quantities of dry land plaster over the manure pile as it accumulates. Swill barrels are most place of attraction for flies, and from the kitchen door, and in the latter case the swill should be kept in the desired effect. In the house the only sure way to get rid of them is by using tight fitting door and window screens and the keeping of fly paper in convenient places.

ORIGIN OF BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

This mixture is a combination of copper, the bordeaux mixture, which into water and lime, which is caustic, and is an invaluable aid to orchard and vineyard owners, as is attested by many cheers. It is said that next to the town of Bordeaux, in the region of certain vineyards by the roadside were to the habit of sprinkling them with verdigris to give them a fine appearance of having been poisoned in order to prevent pilfering of the fruit. The a mixture of copper sulphate and lime was used on the vineyards with success. When the mixture sank its appearance on these vineyards was noticed by the vines which had been given this treatment were free from fungous growth and thus by a very simple deduction the mixture, known as bordeaux mixture was given the credit for the good work. It was found by later experiments that it has held first place as the most valuable and effective fungicide.

THE ROUND BARN.

Some who plan to build barns are desirous of knowing whether or not a common rectangular structure will be to more satisfactory than a round one. Many of the round barn as well as some disadvantages are worth noting. The round barn is the more economical in case of storm, and for this reason some respects is more easily done, particularly if the silo is in the center. On the other hand, the round barn is more difficult to build and unless the whole the interior space cannot be economically used. There is no incidental rather than rectangular spaces to be left unoccupied by the round barn. It is no longer considered necessary that the silo should be placed in the barn structure, and hence it becomes a matter of taste whether the round barn, except for convalescence in feeding operations, should be built or not. A HEARTY REPAST.

By J. EUGENE DRAPER.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

"Calmen?"

Calmen was a driver's box turned his head and saw a seedy looking individual, unshaven, with a bundle of bedclothing from the sidewalks near the Tombs, New York. Quickly pulled up beside the fellow and asked him what he wanted.

"I have no to the W. hotel on Fifth avenue."

"If not I must see the color of your money."

"So I do not look worthy of credit?"

"You look as if you had a mistake of a policeman."

The vagrant was chuckled with evident satisfaction.

"You would not know me for a mainstake, would you?" he asked.

"I would know you for a jailbird." The driver started to drive on.

"Hold on," said the seedy man. "I am in the way to relieve a hearty repast. How would you like to dirdie it with me?"

Calmy looked incredulous.

"See here," said the seedy man, approaching the driver and assuming a confidential air, "I have just recovered without your assistance or that of some enhanced cab without to get well for it."

"Well do you with me to do?"

"Let me explain. I am John Gold, born made a fortune in the Klondike at the W. club that, dressed in these rags. I met a old friend of mine at the principal hotels in New York. I have just to exchange the money for me with the manager of the W."

"Why don't you change it yeni How can I do that?"

"Drive me to the hotel. I will alight while you stand beside your cab with your whip in your hand. Then I will go into the rafe and take a seat. You go to the manager and tell him in a voice that I am Mr. Gold, that I have been robbed of my money while at his hotel and that if he will permit you to give you the money in the guiser to half the winkage."

The driver was not looking at the heavenly sweetness of humanity, turning the matter over in his mind. He said finally:

"Have you proof of your story?" he asked.

"If I had and proved procedure it I would not be in these unctions are worrying me at this very minute and I'd have no time to get a repast."

"Get in," said the cabman.

The driver waited, as when the cab, with his diverse mutable looking occupant, stopped at the entrance of the W. He alighted, passed the rathmen, who stood outside and entered the office unnoticed. The monsieurs were viewing their historians, and the clerk was busy with a mighty filled with diverse. The ragged man looked about and at a vacant chair in the eye of every swell in the room being found upon. Finally he was seated and sat turned toward the manager, who was talking to a well dressed man. The manager listened attentively, keeping his eye all the time on the ragged man who was intently studying the menu. Suddenly a waiter was called and directed to serve him. The cabman disappeared.

It was soon whispered among the crew of the W. that a millionaire was winning a bet by eating a dinner in the hotel to the value of which he selected the tables near the one at which the ragged man was seated and watched him. He seemed to relish his dinner as if he had not eaten for days before. Then after dish were set before him he ate the contents enamored. Not content with moderate priced wines, he ordered the highest vintages. His waiter was assiduous in his attentions. Finally that one of each kind of his tastes would tip him with a few dollars at the least. And all the while groups of people were watching and whispering, for the fame of the millionairelessire in rags winning a bet.

"What are ambassadors here?" remarked a lady. "I would know him before I would the rest." But no comment were uttered than he is—if, indeed, that was going on.

"They say there is old Dutch blood in the Golds," said another.

"Look! He is shoveling the food into his mouth with his knife. How funny!"

Gold is to keep up the deception."

At last the man's appetite was satisfied, and, calling for the proper cigar, he told the waiter he would like to see the proprietor. He was immediately served with great deference.

"I have had a very fine meal, sir," he said to the manager, "and I have enjoyed an excellent dinner at your hotel. However, I suppose there are drawbacks to be told you that I am a pauper. I have had a dinner I would be willing to go back for a few months longer and there put on the rags I have to get my appetite."

The proprietor, after relishing his heads together as if greatly pleased at the last remark, extended a hand to the table. Those at the tables near by tittered.

"Come," persisted Dagua. "Call the police. I have nowhere to sleep tonight and wish for shelter."

Reluctantly the proprietor became convinced that he had been duped and called a policeman. The ragged man was recognized as a friendly jailbird and taken to the Tombs. The next morning he was sent up for two months for purloining a bedtick.

CARRIED LY STORM.

By F. A. SITTCHEL.
[Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.]

The Von Puttkamers were one of the most respectable families in Germany. Their environs, their manners, their daily occupations were the same as they had been several hundred years before, when the first Puttkamer was permitted to build on to his name. They lived on the family estate at Reinsdorf, a few miles crowning a certain hour, shrivelled to their duties, household and social, during the day and went to bed and to sleep at the same hour every night. Such habits never occurred to disturb the serenity of their lives and it did not occur to any one of them, especially to Herr Von Puttkamer and his good wife, that any disconcerting episode would ever occur to them.

But where young women are grown to be they have become what you please always a skeleton in the family closet. The mother says nothing but every daughter will mate and leave the home and, but the father, if such a thought comes into his head, either banishes it as unbecoming or thinks it will not happen in the far future. The time comes at last when a daughter comes when the whole Puttkamer family was startled to its feet by the shock of an earthquake.

An explosion arrived from a young officer in the Prussian army for permission to pay his addresses to Johanna Puttkamer. This was equivalent to asking for the girl. At first sight the horrible proposition to take away one of the household was considered. Then note was taken of the wolf who had broken into the fold. Who was he? A Von, an officer and a gentleman of ancient family. But with this the list of reverses concluded added. At the university where he had studied his wild oats had darkened more than the antelopes of "Saul." A big man, with long legs, he strode through German customs, trampling them at every step. He never did anything as any one else would do it. He had no reverence, no fear. He could not be driven either with drunk ranks of love. Terrible as it was to give up one sudden, it was extremely to risk her happiness with such a man.

A family council was called—that is, a conference between the older members. The aspirant's position, talents, beauties, were dis-cussed and reasoning threw them. Of the one bread was the supreme officer's fealty and social status, on the other his mad passion. So the mother of the household forces. It was not dressed who to pass. Many others of the might prove a good mates nor to accept what might prove a very bad one. Some inscription rose until an acquaintance with the suitor could be made. The final decision was to invite him to the family domain and look him over. If he were much in love, he would wait; if not—well, perhaps he could be sent to the bliss. So Herr von Puttkamer wrote the young man permission to pay the house of the hour at which the saloon would receive departures was made to receive him according to the sacred traditions of the family. The matter of ten many months and unseen were invited to be present at the visit for the benefit of their observations might be obtained. As was to be permitted a remote till some estimate of his prospects as a husband had been secured then to be sent away for further deliberation, perhaps other visits and a final decision, which would be communicated to him at the home.

Meanwhile the girl applied for decorative and the wearer of the line brownstone.

When the day came round and the hour approached for the suitor's arrival at the Puttkamer family and the old set and most trusted relations were lined up to receive him to protect the bonis from any sudden dash of the wild Johanna was stationed in the center of the group between her father and mother, while the others arranged as wings on either side. A clatter of horse's hoofs was heard coming up the driveway at a gallop, and a moment later a tall man young man threw himself in the ground. There stood the father and mother glaring solemnly, between them the blushing Johanna, with her eyes cast on the ground. Without a moment's hesitation the new man threw his arms around her, drew her tightly to his breast and covered her face with kisses. Meanwhile the assembled guests moved finished lightning from their eyes at this annihilation of all their plans, of their precaution.

But the victory was with the young man. He had carried the position by storm. It was not long before the father and mother realized that the case for was settled. What! Prevent their daughter from marrying a man whom she loves who had embraced her? Never. The happiness of a child is to be sacrificing the problem did not take place. It was not long that the old Johanna was to be given over to her lover therein he were a monster before he left Reinsdorf the pair were through the house of betrothal.

Years after this triumph, with the same wilful decision, the man who made it achieved others in a far different field than at state-ownership and diplomacy. For years he directed the policy of the king of Prussia, he heralded that king's saying. Finer, and from the palace of a restless prodigal of his chief emperor of Germany. His name will be handed down among the greatest of European statesmen. It was Otto von Bismarck.

THE BANNER FARM STATE.

Missouri Tracts Smaller, but in Number They Exceed Others.

Missouri has more farms than any other state in the Union. Within her borders are 264,880 farms, which is over 120 acres to the farm. The improved land in each farm averages 72 acres, or 62% per cent. These figures are based on the last census report. According to the report of 1900 there were and other interests, the farms in Missouri as well as in all the best agricultural states are smaller than in the Dakotas.

Missouri does not go so much record from her lands per acre as do many of the other states, but in the fact that her census report, the money made on each of the farms is more than the average, $9.58 an acre. This is much less than that of the farms in the Dakotas and Missouri. The return per acre in Ohio was $13.39; Illinois, $12.42; Illinois, $12.84; Iowa, $12.22.

Seeds a Card Apiece.

Although the average farm is cent apiece, or from $50 to $100 a pound. The cost is small, but the value is great.

When first growing from the seed the young plantlets have two fine leaf stalks and one leaf on each stalk. The second year the plant throws out leaf on each part, and the third year the plant has its three parts with three leaves on each part, and this year a seed ball forms.

This grows direct from the main stalk of the plant and from four to five inches above the foliage. The average plant produces from fifty to seventy seeds and sometimes goes as high as one hundred. These are the seeds of which I have mentioned.

The fourth and fifth years one leaf is added to each stalk. The fifth year the plant is full grown, having fifteen forks and five leaves on each stalk. It grows from two and a half to three feet in height, sometimes as high as two and a half feet across. The leaves are of good flat, about four inches long and two inches wide, and when full grown with seedbead edges.

It takes five years to grow a root from seed for market and eighteen months to grow a root from a root cutting. There is more cultivated root now on the market than ever before. The roots are found on high, dry land in the woods and never in swampy land.

How Color Affects Growth.

Color may affect growth. Certain Castle Plantsmitten put seedlings of the different zones into four different houses—an ordinary conservatory, a red house, a yellow house and a green house. After a few months the seedlings in the red house practically died, in the blue house practically lost as to size and thus in. They remained in the fallen aspect and remained unchanged in the green house. The green house they grown more than in the ordinary glass house. The seedlings in the yellow and in the red house the seedlings had become the most slender, pale, unproductive and well developed. Afters times as much light as the green house. The red light the plant had become hyperexcitable to its environment and this often retards the processes of development as well as those of growth.

Stick to the Country.

Life in a metropolis exerts young children sharp, but not clever. It often destroys their choice of ever lasting flower, for it hastens the development of their mental faculties, which, unless then superficial, short, but not observant, materials, but without one spark of enthusiasm. They are apt to grow blase, fickle, disconcerted. They see more things than the country bred child, but they see them hurrying through, and they do not properly see anything, for they have neither the time nor capacity to get at the root of all the bewildering objects they contact their little lives.

FLAMES SWEEP PIGEON HILLS

Hunters Start Blaze that Spreads over 150 Acres of Land. Feared that Town would be Burned. Flames Conquered.

Two hunters shooting at rabbits on the edge of the farms of George Bear, Jacob Bear and Jacob Bear, Pigeon Hills, are said to have set fire to the grass on the hills and before the blaze could be controlled spread over 150 acres of wood and grass lands, besides several grouse fields.

The devastate Question is between the farmers and the Bowman and Bittinger Pigeon Hills. Farmers in that section, for a distance of five miles, were at the fire. Some helped to beat it, while others ploughed furrows across the hillsides to stop the flames, but the wind and dry leaves caused the fire to spread rapidly.

The fire was discovered about 9 o'clock and at 6 o'clock it was under control. Heroic efforts were successfully made by the firefighters to save the old Joe Gettysburg home, owned by George Beiner and family. Even it looked as if the house was about to be consumed, the furniture was removed to an adjoining meadow lot, and the wind changing saved the house. The fire spread over an area of several miles, and the fourth hill from on length over the following properties:—George Bear, John Miller, Jacob Miller, J. E. Mouk, Christian Miller, Wilson Mouk, Samuel Berry, Alex Hershey, G. Bell, and Messrs. Allgood and Shafer.

When the reflection of the fire was seen in Hanover, autos, buses, and vehicles were soon travelling the road leading in that direction, besides many taking the trolley. Steamers Truxes, Jacobs Mills, Meagos, Spring Grove and Porters residents went up the fire and assisted in extinguishing the flames. William Meagos, the warden of the fish and game commission, also aided in the work.

They believe they have located a splendid bed of coal. Near the surface they struck a thin vein. Now they are at work on a thicker vein.

The prospecting is being done under the direction of a French engineer. The geologist and children are visiting relatives in Hanover and Mrs. D. V. Keser in Arenicville.

Adams County Teachers who Take Days off in Visit Schools will be Docked by State. Order of Dr. Schaeffer.

Under the ruling of Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, teachers who absent themselves from sessions of county institutes will not receive pay for the time of their absence. This rule will be enforced at the fall and winter sessions of the Adams County Teachers' Institute which will be held in Farmers' Hall December 4 to December 8.

Heretofore it has been the privilege of the teachers attending the institute to devote one day to visiting schools in other counties. Such visitations were accepted as excuses for absence and the teachers were allowed pay for the time thus spent. But it is alleged that privilege in recent years came to be greatly abused and it is for this reason the State Superintendent made his ruling.

This year Superintendent Roth will not report those absent without excuse as present and as a result they will not be paid. The Gettysburg teachers have made a number of visits to other schools Monday of institute week and have given permission by the School Board again this year. The State pays the teachers for their attendance at institute.

MCCONNELLSBURG COAL

Mogean brothers, the McConnellsburg men who have been opening coal, they believe will prove a profitable one. Another attempt will be made a mile east of McConnellsburg, above the pike that runs from Mercersburg. The direction of a French engineer who is touted into the side of the mountain 50 feet and secured therefrom a variety of combustible black rock that they are using in their furnaces with success.

They believe they have located a splendid bed of coal. Near the surface they struck a thin vein. Now they are at work on a thicker vein.

The prospecting is being done under the direction of a French engineer. The geologist and children are visiting relatives in Hanover and Mrs. D. V. Keser in Arenicville.

FEARS OVERFLATTENING

Dr. Barker says he is afraid the enthusiasm of many people for fruit growing is going to carry them away and that some of the orchards which are set down and there are what orchard men call "fruit orchards" because the soil can be controlled," and he "I have seen many orchards which were planning orchards and laying trees wholesale, but many of the nurseries are sold out. Now I fear that there will go into it without reckoning on several villages and communities and two of the great factors in fighting the fruit pests. Many of these new orchards will be for sale and others will be neglected.

Dr. Surface says that his recent announcement that his division plant establish several hundred acres of apple tion orchards fifteen miles apart, where the fruit pests will be controlled, has resulted in growing trees could have an opportunity to study methods of fighting scale and pruning trees as demonstrated by the state has brought 600 offers of orchards for the use of the state.

BADLY BITTEN BY BIG BOAR

Ira Schwartz, of Two Taverns, Knocked Down and Savagely Attacked by Enraged Hog. Abdomen Severely Torn.

Ira Schwartz, residing on the Jacob Harnish farm in Mount Joy township was severely bitten by a hog on last Friday and is now suffering from ugly wounds which if inflicted on his middle.

Mr. Schwartz was driving the hour from the barn to his home as he had done many times before and whenever he approached the animal would it with a small whip. The hog never seemed to resent it or show that it was hurt seriously and without any warning turned on Mr. Schwartz made a rush at him and knocked him to the ground striking him severely. The unfortunate man was too much surprised to defend himself and would likely have been much more severely injured had not the animal turned of his own accord and walked away.

The wounds were deep and ugly and bled profusely. The boar's teeth tore the ugly jagged holes in the flesh which required a large number of stitches to close. Dr. H. C. Rinehart, of this place, was summoned immediately and closed the gashes.

Mr. Schwartz is a married man about thirty years of age and has several children.

NOTIFIES POLICE SHE'S BEING MURDERED

Woman Attacked While Telephoning For Help.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 28.—The hoarse in the police signal room at Minneapolis rang, and Night Martin, the operator "plugged in" on a private wire.

A woman's voice, excited, but low, came over the wire.

"He'll kill me; send help to—then came a gurgling sound and a thud as the instrument fell. The receiver remained open, and the operator heard sounds of a struggle outside and then a shot. Then all was silent.

Finally the transmitter was picked up, and a voice said: "For God's sake, send help to—"

Another struggle. Then: "This is the police? He killed her. He cut her throat. He has injured the gas with a dagger. He went out the back way. Hurry! Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!"

Somebody interrupted the excited monologue long enough to find that the girl was a servant in a flat around the fourth. A patrol wagon full of detectives and a surgeon started for the address was on the way to the scene in a few minutes. Neighbors found Grace Livingston lying unconscious on the floor in a pool of blood. Her face had been slashed twice with a razor, and her throat had been cut so deep as to bleed under her chin.

The police patrol that the woman was married to Burl B. McGill, a railroad engineer, who is known to have been in the house and quarreled with the girl. He is said to have threatened trouble and went to another house in the neighborhood. He is known to be in the act of commencing assistance and was not at home when the police arrived. The police are now looking for him. The woman is in a critical condition.

DE ARMOND MET DEATH IN FIRE

Congressman Perished With Grandson in Burning Home.

DAUGHTER SAVES MOTHER

Democratic Leader Sacrificed His Life in Effort to Save Grandson—Their Bodies Found Lying Side by Side in Ruins.

Representative David DeArmond one of the most widely known Democratic congressmen, and his grandson David A. DeArmond III., aged six years, were burned to death in a fire that destroyed the DeArmond home near Butler, Mo.

Congressman DeArmond and his young grandson occupied one room on the south side of the building, while Mrs. DeArmond and Mrs. Estelle Bird, a married daughter, were in separate rooms on the opposite side of the house. Nettie Bird, the married girl's child, a maid, had a room on the west end of the house.

Mrs. Clark was awakened by a cry and her son-in-law at the door of her room. She could see nothing from the part of the house where the congressman and his "Waddie," as the grandson was called, slept.

"Get me out of here!" she heard Waddie cry.

"Never mind, son; I'll save you," Congressman DeArmond replied.

Those were the last words either of the victims uttered. A moment later the smoke increased in volume and Mrs. DeArmond fled from the burning house to the telephone. Within a minute she was on the line, but the alarm to the telephone office and hurried back to the room of her mother.

By this time the entire second floor was clouded with smoke and flames were leaping from the windows. Grasping her son by the arm, DeArmond's daughter, she literally dragged her into the room. Then she ran to China for help. of aiding those in the other part of the house. Urging her mother from the stairway, the younger woman, with difficulty, reached the washing and opening the street door.

Nettie Bird, the maid, it developed later, had been one of the first to escape. She ran into the street from the rear door after the first cry of fire. She was naked, but she had presence of mind to comprehend the situation and hasten from the house.

The fraternal loss is placed at $20,000 on the burned home and the household goods in the room. The cause of the fire is unknown. The two bodies were found lying side by side.

The old Trust Will Appeal.

The Standard Oil Company will appeal to the United States supreme court from the decision on the case in St Paul, Minn., dissolving the oil trust. It is said the appeal will be made regardless of the nature of the decree or the action taken within 30 days.

The case was heard in the United States circuit court at St. Louis in April, 1908, by Circuit Judges Sanborn, of St Paul; Van Devanter, of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Amidon, of Fargo, Amidon, of Fargo, N. D.

Judge Sanborn, of St. Paul, the presiding judge, wrote the opinion and the decree in which all the judges concur, and sent them with a concurring opinion to Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, in St. Louis, who filed them and entered the decree in that city.

The decree declared the Standard Oil company to be a combination in restraint of trade, within the meaning of the Sherman anti-trust law of July 2, 1890.

By the decree the company is restrained from continuing in interstate and foreign commerce with all the subsidiaries, until after the dissolution or divorce in the decree has been accomplished, the decree to go into effect in thirty days unless an appeal is taken in the meantime.

Drops 72 in Custom House.

The wholesale cut from the customs service in the New York city of 72 men who have been implicated in the Sugar frauds and other schemes to cheat the government, but against whom no evidence of actual criminal acts of crime has been found, began in earnest when Collector Loeb announced the discharge of James F. Vail, formerly deputy surveyor in charge of the weighing division; George R. Dodell, an inspector and formerly chief clerk in charge of the same division; James P. Hyland and Joseph O'Carroll, formerly weighing clerks, and nineteen other weighers and gaugers, whose names will be mentioned in the official report given out at the end of the week. As fast as could be learned, the men granted immunity and a number of others held for resulting against Philip Mastro at his trial for conspiracy to defraud the government out of duties on cheese are included in the men whose names will appear in the docket. Whether or not any of the discharged men will be held for the face criminal charges lare is a question. Mr. Loeb and Assistant United States Attorney Stimson refused to answer.

All Customs Frauds to Be Probed.

Vindication of the charges that the "sleeper trust" customs frauds, practically all of which, it would have been under the statute of limitations and could not be prosecuted, were publicly discussed at a conference at the treasury department at Washington between Secretary MacVeagh, Attorney General Wickersham, Collector Loeb and United States District Attorney Wise, of the southern district of New York, participated.

Incidentally, Secretary MacVeagh announced that the $2,000,000 which the Sugar Refining company had paid to the government on account of the frauds was a clear showing in interest on of the most important phases of the whole investigation, the commission of frauds by importers, which have cost the government involving losses of millions to the government.

Rattlesnake Kills Girl.

Miss Della Jones, eighteen years old, daughter of Mrs. Mary Jones, was killed at Amsterdam, Ga., by a bite from being struck by a rattlesnake while walking in a flower garden of her home.

The girl was in the garden with her brother and struck Miss Jones as she was walking past her. The snake then struck the girl on the leg between the knee and ankle. Miss Jones died. The girl ran screaming to the house, dragging the snake with her. Her mother, who was not her, snatched the snake from the girl and killed it with a hoe. The snake measured seven feet long and was of unusual size.

The marks on the girl's leg were seen by physicians.

Physicians were summoned, but were unable to save her life. She died in terrible agony five hours after being struck by the snake.

SEAL BODIES UP IN CHERRY MINE

Fire Compels Closing of Ill-Fated St. Paul Shaft.

VICTIMS' LAST HOPE GONE

Women and Children Were Frantic When They Realized the Terrible End of the Great Disaster—Bodies May Never Be Recovered.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 21.—The St. Paul mine here in which 310 workmen were entombed by fire and explosion last Saturday a week ago, has been sealed. The fire was still smoldering when it was decided best to cut off all air from the shaft and probably remain closed for several weeks.

The bodies of nearly 200 men are entombed within its depths. The confirmation of this sad fact literally closed the fire-scarred mouth of the mine. Hope of ever rescuing the bodies of these victims has vanished in the face of the step taken by the officials here. The sealing of the mine was the last act.

In the over gallery 186 bodies were found, but they could not be removed, as the fire had gained too great headway.

Not since the recovery of the first bodies from the depths of the fifty-foot workings have such scenes been witnessed as the last heartrending picture at the mouth of the mine shaft after the determination to seal the mine was made.

Hundreds of the grief-stricken women, with fatherless children clinging to fear to their dresses, gathered in groups sobbing and moaning. The realization of the horrible end of the great disaster has aroused a frantic fervor.

Women fell on their knees, dragging their children down with them, beating their cries of despair.

The dissolution of the workmen at the stop taken by the mine officials was openly cursed by the women who were to have been recalled, have been ordered to remain. Deputies with no command, declared he did not expect to be called upon to act, but he stood by in case of trouble. A large force of engineers and mine officials were also on hand, but their presence did not seem to become too demonstrative.

Just before the fire was sealed in the air shaft, until the timbers had become well charred, the cage in which the last sealing process had not been resorted to, ascended. Those at the mouth of the shaft above ground would have been seeing the bodies of the victims. Rescuers are still clinging to the belief that with the sealing of the mine the fire will have been doomed to their death. Experts say that it will be days before there is no impossibility.

The last hope of the entombed men is the mine disaster follows:

Total number of men in the mine at the time of the explosion, 310.

Men who escaped when fire broke out, 124.

Dead before recovered, identified, 186.

Men rescued alive, 4.

Men rescued after the fire, 24.

Rescue party burned in cage, 10.

Men still entombed, 161, 186, 161.

Total death list, 310.

REVOLT SPREADS IN NICARAGUA

Revolutionists Are Maintaining an Effective Blockade.

MORE FIGHTING IMMINENT

State Department Receives Advices From Scene of Conflict by Wireless. Zelaya's Excuse For Executing Two Americans Is Unsatisfactory.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The revolution in Nicaragua is spreading, in the opinion of Consul-General Lee Christmas of the United States cruiser Des Moines, which is off the east coast of Nicaragua. The revolutionary forces are reported to be maintaining an effective blockade and are patrolling off Greytown with two gunboats. Assurance is given that American and foreign interests are not threatened. These are the important facts contained in the first official report of the navy department from the commander of the Des Moines, dated Bluefields, Nov. 23 the revolutionary gunboats Venus, but without the Vindicator.

The revolutionary forces now have possession of the best country in Nicaragua, including Rama, where Estrada has his headquarters, according to the Des Moines landed at Greytown, Nov. 23, to protect American citizens.

Messages by Wireless.

The state department was advised by the Greytown telegraph company that during the present interruption of telegraph lines between Managua and Costa Rica it is possible to send messages to Costa Rica by wireless to Colon, but that the service is not continuous, as there are not enough operators between Tuesday and Thursday. Telegrams sent to Colon from the state department is experiencing in its efforts to communicate with the American citizens at Castrel American porta, Rosario and Bluefields.

Time the expansion of the revolution in Nicaragua, the government of Zelaya continues to execute those who are suspected of being enemies of the present, or forecasted in the same breath. Two Americans, Leroy Cannon, a soldier of fortune, and Lee Roy Cannon, a relative, are executed by the Zelaya government. The latter was executed after the state department had made representations in behalf of the two men. Zelaya's excuse for executing the Americans is unsatisfactory to the state department, which has ordered a further investigation.

Cannon and Groce were shot within twenty-four hours after capture, and it is said that they were weak and almost prostrate from the effects of fever and privations they endured. Soldiers are said to have snatched their watches, rings and money, and with sticks, kicked them, strong them to the ground and then shot them in their heads in order to frighten them into telling what information they might have about a revolution aimed to overthrow President Zelaya.

A Nicaraguan correspondent was also just arrived here from Bluefields, reports that Messrs. Cannon and Groce were executed because they were a delight in Costa Rican, and not Nicaraguan territory when they were captured. They were with only three soldiers when they were attacked by troops crossed the frontier and put them under arrest.

PARKHURST RAPS WOMAN SUFFRAGE

He Thinks It Is Interest of "Tandem Polygamy."

HURLS SLURS AT LEADERS

Preacher Alludes Sneeringly to Two Prominent Divorcees and Declares Sex Are Becoming Further Apart in Their Mindness.

New York, Nov. 24.—Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst in his Thanksgiving day sermon at the Madison Square Presbyterian church considered women's suffrage. As his text he took the verse from Genesis: "So God created man in his own image: in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Dr. Parkhurst said:

"Why was it that 'God created man, male and female?' Was it to be understood that it is simply a physiological importance for the production of progenitors? Are those who stand at the level of this animal consideration? Is not upon the relation between the sexes a merely animal proportion?

"Perhaps they do not think that. It may be hoped that they do not. But what do they think? Is it seeing but one side of the picture? Are those who are sometimes a good deal up in the air? Are they not in the prevailing level of distinct and coherent thought and will as to what they think? Are there neither rhapsody nor ringroom and the like, just why they are two sexes? Is there no reason?

"Biologists tell us that the highest up we go in the scale of animal life the more the respective functions of the two sexes become differentiated, and the more they are dependent, each upon other in their quality, aptitude and duration. From which we are led to conclude that the fuse the type of human development the more distinctive man and woman will become in all that relates to their respective spheres of sociality, and therefore to their interdependence in the relationships of the service.

"What may have individually transpired between ladies in the recent divorce cases, or between the members of the other sex that rendered them necessary, I know not. But the publicity and immodesty indicted upon members of both sexes by the case is of course. I do know that there was one woman very conspicuous because of the pictures who had herself changed husbands so often that she must have been something in her case that would give pain to the average citizen. Yes, and there was another one there, who had been conspicuous in the front of the movement, I mean the eruption, that had been married to a prominent citizen, who had left him and married another prominent citizen, who in his turn had left her and married another woman. Such a case might be called 'tandem polygamy,' and I am told that the woman with which they are supposed to be possessed, and the one with which they are certainly are possessed, should be introduced to each other at the hotel and should be assured that the understanding of the situation was to be finally to be more or less accurately recognized in the legislation or the laudatory of the leaders of that revolution."

Home Course In Live Stock Farming

X.—Handling Dairy Products.

By C. V. GREGORY,
Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture," "Model Manure and the Farm."

Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.

THE importance of cleanliness in milking was mentioned in the previous article. In addition to taking care not to allow dirt into the milk, it should not be allowed to stand in the stable, and time after milking, milk should be strained more rapidly, and better that is "off flavor" in the milk.

The milk room should be in connection with the barn or at the well. The latter, if not too far from the barn, is the best place. If the milk room is in the barn it should be separated from it by a tight passageway, with a door at each end to ascertain all odors. The milk room should have windows enough to secure plenty of light and ventilation. The floor should be of smooth cement, if the walls are not of glass material or of brick covered with cement they can be more easily kept clean than if they are made of wood. The floor should be scrubbed often enough to keep it perfectly clean, and the tank should be cleaned out frequently.

Use of the Hand Separator.

Within the last few years the hand separator has come into general use on farms where there are more than one cow, doing away with the old gravity system of raising cream. With the separator all the cream can be removed, which is impossible by any other method. The skimmilk can be fed to the calves warm and sweet, which is a great advantage. There is less fat in the skimmilk, but the amount can be supplied to the calves a good deal more cheaply by increased feed of grain. There may be much less space in the milk tank, as by this the cream will be kept to the best. Where a creamery is patronized a separate grade of cream is saved by using only the cream to best.

In selecting a separator the most important point to look to is the ease of cleaning. There is a great deal of difference in separators in this respect. Some are so constructed that it is almost impossible to wash all parts thoroughly, while others can be completely taken apart that washing is an easy task. It is not the number of parts to a bowl that makes a separator difficult to keep clean, but the ease with which all these parts may be separated, so that they may be reached with a brush.

Some of the other points to consider are convenience, capacity and durability. The capacity will depend largely upon the number of cows kept. It is better to get a machine of rather more large than too small. The latest models of many machines of separators are made so that the top of the supply can be set higher, which is very handy. No other kind should be bought. It is a useless waste of energy to lift large cans of milk five or six feet high every day and morning. With these the bowl makes the skimmilk and cream cans may be run on the floor, so that they will require little lifting.

Testing and Grading Cream.

Serious objection has been made to the cream system on the ground that it lowers the quality of the cream and butter. It is open to some of this objection ground for this complaint. Unless absolute cleanliness in the rule the cream is liable to be of poor quality, and the butter is not likely to be of the best of food for injurious bacteria. But the same quality may be had by the separator as at best cream. Never have the best milk every syrup and leave it until the next milking. It cannot be too often said that in this way in cool weather a stirring will cool water, followed by the addition of a pinch of hot water will do at night. At least once a day in winter and every time the machine is used in summer the bowl should be taken apart, washed well and thoroughly scalded, be sure to remove every particle of grease and dirt. The other part may be rinsed in cold water to keep clean and dry as a loose for bacteria. To accomplish "dish rag flavor" is clean found in butter, due to the use of a rag for washing the separator. Neither should a rag be used to dry the bowl or other linware. In starting to wash the separator and other dairy dishes cold water should be used first to remove the milk, as hot water sets the milk sours and makes it difficult to remove. This rinsing should be followed by a thorough washing with hot water and a fine cleaning with boiling water. If the dishes are then set on the brick of the stove they will dry quickly without rusting.

Handling the Cream.

As soon as the cream is separated it should be cooled down to about 50 degrees by setting in cold water. This can be done by putting it in a tank of cold water, or better, by placing the cream too long before taking it to the creamery. In cool weather it will keep sweet for three or four days, and in warm weather and three or four in cold. Good judgment is required to care for cream.

It is only pays to make butter on the farm unless special customers can be established. Cream should be sold regularly until there is one within easy shipping distance of the farmer. Where a local organization of co-operative creamery has been started it is always a healthy competitive basis, so that the prices paid for cream are based on the value of the market will warrant. These large creameries are usually equipped with all the latest appliances for butterworking. They are in charge of experienced buttermakers and are in shape to turn out a uniform product which will sell for much higher prices than the ordinary run of butter from farms.

Use of the Tester.

No dairy farmer can afford to be without a Babcock tester. A complete tester, consisting of a tester, milk and cream bottles and a bottle for measuring in acid, can be purchased for about $6. With a tester the farmer can test his cows, as described in article 8, at home. He can test the cream to see that it is working properly. If the bowl is wobbly or for mechanical reasons a considerable amount of fat is left in the skimmilk will point out the defrayum knowing anything about it. If you have a creamery even a tester will enable you to test your buttermilk and skimmilk. The tester can not you are losing much butter fat in this way. If the patrons do not test any your tester will come handy for figuring a check for the tests at the creamery. Most creamerymen are honest, but that is no reason why the dishonest ones should be run on honor. Use the composite test. Take 2 or 3 per cent will add greatly to the value of the test. Composite samples can not be detected unless the patrons have tampered with them.

The Babcock tester is simple to operate. The glassware is put to test-ed should be thoroughly tested by pouring hot water into the tests at first or four times. A sample is then sucked up to the mark on the pipette by putting your finger on the top of the pipette to keep the liquid from running out and let come to the mark on the neck. Then it is emptied into one of the test bottles. Number the bottle to correspond with the cow. The same pipette will need is what is known as commercial sulphuric acid. The acid will be found in the glass jar in the crate with the acid, taking care not to get any of the acid on the hands. Then the acid carefully down the side of the test bottle until there is thoroughly with the milk by giving the bottle a whirling motion. The sulphuric acid combines with the albumen and casein and leaves the fat free.

Set the bottles in the tester as soon as the acid has been added. When all the bottles are filled the tester should be turned at a uniform rate of about 100 revolutions a minute for five minutes. This brings the fat to the top of the liquid in the bottle. Hot water should then be added carefully to bring the fat up to the neck of the bottle. The machine is then whirled

HARRY BOWERS SENT TO PEN.

Digiorville Boy who Took Ten Thousand Dollars Given not Less Than Six Months Nor More Than Three Years.

Harry D. Bowers, of Digiorville, who two weeks ago was arrested for the theft of $10,000 in the United States Express company, in Harrisburg, on Monday pleaded guilty before Judge Kunkel, in Dauphin County Court, and was given a sentence in the penitentiary of not less than six months nor more than three years.

E. B. Hamilton, district attorney, disclosed the fact that the young man had been separated and the day after the theft sent the money to his father in Digiorville. His father hurried to Harrisburg and gave to a delivery of $100 that Bowers had spent and told him to return it. He told his father he had returned it, but instead took it to a Mr. Lucas. When arrested it was $200 short. Bowers could not account for the $700. In imposing sentence the court said: "Bowers was repentant as is shown by his confiding in his father of events, and this is in his favor. It is a first offense, but it cannot be overlooked. There have been a number of cases of similar sort lately, but the other offenders were young men.

"The recent legislature has advised the use of the indeterminate system. The court had that power provision to the legislature's act and the only part of the act has been to advertise the fact that first offenders may escape the penalty of their crimes.

"The certainty of punishment is a more powerful preventive of crime. It is not a restitution to the first offender that he may get out on probation and encourages them in crime."

A WOMAN'S PROPOSAL.

By MARION MAY HOLT.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

The Prince Adam, the king's youngest daughter, having fre twelve years and three older sisters, had no hope of ever inheriting the throne. Those who are born at the wrong end of a royal family are not in an enviable position. The princess most needs keep up all the outward state which is not ever coming to a regal inheritance. Her brothers, being superior sex, can be trusted in a gift he had never seen, but as to all the rest lived simple enough as would be king. The princess was prepared to be one of royal blood without hope that she would ever be a queen.

The matter did not especially trouble her till she had met a prince and fell in love with her tutor. His father was a count, and he was the younger son of the title and estates, but he was to be married to the princess Adam. Then she discovered that she wanted the nobleman and determined the young man then the injustice of her position compared to her. She went to her father, the king, whose pet she was, threw her arms around his neck and begged to be allowed to marry the tutor. The king could refuse her nothing, but consented and told her to be single and bear what to him.

"But he is not my suitor," said the princess.

"Certainly not," replied the king. "It is you who have proposed to him."

"But I have not proposed to him!"

"Then, child, if you intend to marry him you had best do so."

The obstacles having been removed, the princess betrothed herself of the proposal. Everything in life is to be said to herself. "I've read stories of men who have always from youth upward to the girls they loved, and I never had any patience with them. I never will be brave."

To make matters worse, both because of maidenly modesty and that she had not proposed, she would be permitted to marry the man of her choice, she had never given him the slightest intimation that she loved him. She must leave him all to do and follow it up with a proposition. "I shall intimate to him," she said, "the way the wind blows, and if he fails to see it I can't help it."

Having valley tried for a month to make it blow "offal to him," she at last resolved to do so after her daily lesson on a certain morning. So, the exercises being finished, when he rose for arrow to go she said to him:

"Please don't go before today. I have something to say to you."

He resumed his seat and looked at her inquiringly. There was not much encouragement in the expression of his countenance.

"You told me yesterday," she said, "that it was the turning of the earth on its axis that caused the trade winds to blow in an diagonal direction in the northern hemisphere and in a contrapositive direction in the southern hemisphere. It is only in the northern hemisphere, where the winds blow east. I believe that's right, don't you?"

In the southern hemisphere they would blow west, wouldn't they?"

"Quite right."

"Well, then, I would like to know to if everything in the southern hemisphere is reversed. Do the birds sing and women down there stand in a reversed relationship?"

Astonished at the irrelevance of the question, he looked at her in silence for a time, then said: "I am not aware of any such transposition. The only country lying south of the equator are Oceanica, Africa and South America, and in none of these have we any such condition."

He looked at the ceiling, then at the floor, then out of the window. His waited for her to proceed.

"I didn't care," she finally continued, "but that pun, being a very smart man, would call me a contrapositive."

Still more confounded, he scratched her chin with a pencil. Digging your royal highness' pardon," he said, "I fail to see what connection whatever between your question and anything that preceded it, such as the organic, inorganic or spiritual condition."

"I supposed you had in a disheartened tone, "that I shall have to ask you a few questions myself. You are always asking me leading questions, you know."

"Try do so."

"At the present—" she paused.

"Well at the present?"

"Which way does the wind blow?"

The young man left his brow, pulled his mustache, rumpled and recombed his hair, then said:

"Theoretically there should be a dead calm at the point."

The girl looked up impatiently.

"I see," said her tutor, "you did not intend to ask that question scientifically."

"No; I did not."

"Perhaps," said the princess, rising, "the day would be warm you will understand what I have said to you."

There was something in the look of reproach she gave him that set a ray of light in upon his brain. And, after all, is not a look the only language of love? Her mysterious message was after all, clear from her beautiful eyes. Yet he could not believe his own ears. Could this daughter of a score of kings dare to look that she loved him? It seemed impossible. But, meanwhile, he determined to risk his fortune.

"At last I can, royal sweetheart," he said, "relate you the wind blows."

The count learned the next morning of his son's proposal, and the princess Adam

FROM TOWN TO COUNTRY.

How a Lawyer and His Family Built Up Both a Business and a Home.

This is the story of a professional man whose longing for the freedom of country life led him at the age of thirty-two to abandon the city for the farm. Unfortunately the record of his early experiences is not preserved. That these were severe is attested by the fact that the man lived to sell his family with a little hired labor, have eleven or seventeen acres of finely cultivated land, built a comfortable home, with modern conveniences, in the midst of a poultry business, and have developed under their management a profitable and best paying farms in the country. In 1905 the gross receipts of the farm were about $5,000. It is considerably larger now.

The farm in question is on the west side of the lagoon region, in the shadow of the Olympic mountains, in Oregon. The produce is sold in the city of Portland, Or., a distance of about 100 miles. The farmer is a lawyer by profession, and for twelve miles over a fairly good macadamized road he drives to and from his county seat, where he has a practice which is considerable, though not large. He has not even failed to deliver his produce at the Portland commission men during the past twelve years.

When the farm was first brought to its present profitable state by the joint efforts of every member of the family, it was sold it to prove to any man when the family moved to the farm. It then consisted of men and wife, three boys and three girls. Since then there has been a boy of thirteen. The only labor ever hired was that of a man who for a time was entered an agricultural college was a woodworking shop. He was there two months in 1906 to help to do the first clearing. He commenced work at two weeks in building the house in 1897 and since every member of the family has had a piece of work coming not over $100 per year. The house was finished and in use the fall of 1908. The father and the three sons did the work. The mother, wife, milked the cows and made the butter. The household duties were not unsystematically disturbed by the mother and daughters. The latter helped their mother and one of the daughters became a teacher of the public schools, another has entered an agricultural college and a third woodworking shop. The latter two months in 1898 to help to do the first clearing. Be Good to Old Apple Trees.

Old apple trees can be brought back into fruitfulness by a thorough a thinner of rich rotted manure around the tree and plowing it under. The roots cannot be plowed from it under. The roots will find it and the new fine branches, all cross limbs and surface growing branches will be cut out. Then take up the sap which should go into the fruit. Many an old apple, pear, peach and plum tree will be made productive by a trimming of the old dead bark, the loose scale and the moss. Use a stiff wire brush to cleanse the bark. Then wash the trunk with a wash used in place of soap. Various tree washes have been advertised, but there is probably nothing better than good homemade soft soap spread on with a stiff scrub brush. Use a wash made of one pound of the pleved and soft soap to a gallon of water. Scrub the trunk and the larger $4000 FIRE IN MENALLEN TWP.

J. Muir Garrettson Loses Heavily in One of the Worst Fires County has ever seen. Stock and Crops Destroyed. No Insurance.

The following property, stock, crops and machinery were destroyed in a terrible blaze on the farm of J. Muir Garrettson, in Menallen township, two miles West of Bendersville between 5.30 and 8 o'clock Thursday evening:

Large bank barn
Adjoining sheds
Hog pen
4 horses and colts
8 cows
18 hogs
125 chickens
11 Angora goats
85 tons of hay
200 bushels of corn
300 bushels of wheat
375 bushels of oats
Large quantity of harness
Corn husker
2 grain drills
1 manure spreaders
Wooden
New modern harrows
Riding and cutting cultivators.

Everything burned except one horse two mules, two hogs, two sets of harness and two drills not in the barn. There was no insurance carried on barn, stock or crops.

The fire was caused by a mule kicking a lighted lantern out of the hand of Mr. Garrettson's young son. The accident occurred near the door of the barn against which the wind was blowing a regular gale and although Mr. Garrettson and family started to work with all haste the flames were fanned at such a rate that they were unable to get out only one horse and two mules before they were driven away by the rapid flames. They then went to the cow stable but were driven out before all the same state of affairs existed at the hog pen. It was but a few minutes after the lantern had been kicked from the boy's hand, spreading burning oil in many directions, before the whole building was a mass of flames. All efforts to save stock proved unavailing. One cow that was gotten out ran back into the flames and two hogs that were gotten out were on fire when they reached the open.

All of Mr. Garrettson's stock was of the best and the loss is a heavy one the machinery was practically new throughout. Two sets of horses were all that escaped the flames to the last line. The fire was decidedly one of the worst in the county for some time. The blaze made a reflection which was seen for many miles, being visible for some distance South of Gettysburg.

UNSUCCESSFUL SEASON ENDS

Gettysburg College closed an unsuccessful foot ball season on Thursday by losing to Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster by the score of 18 to 0.

Franklin and Marshall scored a touchdown in the first half on a fluke and ran after six minutes of play. In the second half by a forward pass and two fast downs Gettysburg carried the ball to the twenty five yard line from which Brosius kicked a field goal. F. and M. made their second touchdown by recovering a Gettysburg fumble. The third was made following a pen alty when Brosius was disqualified for roughness and Gettysburg was penalized to within eight yards of the goal line. Two rushes carried it over.

The Gettysburg Athletic Club play ed another no score game with Littlestown on the latter's field on Thanksgiving Day. The game was both contested and the home side could not score.

The Gettysburg Colored foot ball team played a similar game from Carlisle to a standstill Thursday afternoon on Nixon Field, neither side scoring. The game proved very entertaining to all who braved the wind and came to see it. The following composed the Gettysburg team, Reuben Lyles, Basil Curry, Herman Brown-Edgington Curry, Clarence McDonough, John Craig, Richard Gibbs, Harry Lyles, James Adams, Oliver Carter, Harry Barnes, Clinton Carter.
